

Our Entire Force
Working For You.

Enterprise is evidenced in every corner of this establishment. There is no cessation of energy. Energy, rightly directed, always accomplishes results; and the results that have come to us prove that the public are keenly alive and appreciative as to what we are doing. We keep ever watchful eyes upon two facts, eternal facts: One is: The public wants good goods. The other: The public wants a money's worth. False advertising statements, salespeople's misrepresentations or prices above those elsewhere react as sure as fate. The values we offer to-day are strong, remarkably so; it's the simple truth, and facts are studied all over this ad.—in our store are hundreds more:

NO TOBACCO

Fair For Maysville This Winter.

PROBABLE IT WILL NOT BE HELD AT ALL.

TROUBLOUS TIMES AND PRIME MOVER ILL.

BIG LOSS TO MASON COUNTY.

Maysville, Ky., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—It has been decided that the Maysville Tobacco Fair for 1930 will not be held in February, and it may be, not at all. This is a blow to this city that can hardly be estimated, as these fairs were the means of bringing the buyer and the grower together at a time of the year that meant much to both. Before these fairs were held here this city was hardly found on the map, but now it is known far and wide as the real capital of the famous white Burley tobacco district.

There are several reasons for doing away with the fair next month. The state of the tobacco crop having reached the Burley district, it is feared the holding of the fair might be the means of causing additional friction.

Father of Fair Ill.

The main reason for not holding the fair is the continued illness of the man who was the means of getting up the fairs each year and advertising them, much of the expense being borne by his own private purse. The man is Col. John Duley, who is in poor condition at present to attend to business.

Tobacco at $1 a Pound.

At these fairs there were samples of tobacco that brought as much as $1.50 per pound, while the poorest grades never brought less than twenty-five cents, which showed the superiority of the weed raised in this district. This year the buyers for the various tobacco companies in this country claim that the poorest crops raised in 1929—much of this was partly due to the growers taking advantage of the advice asked at the fairs last year and had tried to excel his neighbor in raising good tobacco.

The bringing to Maysville of the immense plant of the American Tobacco Company was the result of the first tobacco fair held here, and the loss of these annual exhibits means much to this place. It is thought that later in the year a fair might be held, but at present it is thought best to not attempt it.

PLEDGE SUPPORT TO FAIRBANKS.

Seventh District Indiana Republicans Adopt Resolutions.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Today the Seventh district, to-day re-elected Oliver P. Taylor, district chairman by acclamation, adopted resolutions strongly endorsing the candidacy of Vice President Charles W. Fairbanks for the presidential nomination and endorsed Representative Overstreet, National Chairman Harry S. New and William L. Taylor for gubernatorial nomination. The resolutions endorsing Mr. Fairbanks read:

"The Republican Party of the seventh congressional district in convention assembled, congratulates the people of the State and nation, irrespective of party, upon the splendid services rendered our common country by that distinguished son of Indiana, Vice President Charles W. Fairbanks.

"We recognize in him a man whose devotion to duty and whose unwavering loyalty to the principles of the Republican party most eminently qualified him for any honor at the hands of the American people.

"We, therefore, heartily endorse and ratify the resolutions adopted by the Republican Party of the seventh congressional district on the 26th day of December, 1929, submitting the name of our distinguished son to the Republican Party for the presidential nomination. In bringing about his nomination we pledge to the people of Indiana the earnest co-operation of the Republicans of this district."

BET OF $5,000 ON GOV. JOHNSON.

Opening of New York Book on the Presidency.

New York, Jan. 11.—With the conventions which will nominate presidential candidates in a few days away, betting on the result of the election has already been started at the metropolitan headquarters for campaign wagers, the Hoffman House.

The first wager of the campaign is reported as having been made last night on the order of John S. McDonald, a turfman, to bet $5,000 that Gov. Johnson, of Minnesota, if nominated for the presidency, would be elected. The reported taker of the wager is Thomas H. Shevin, father of Thomas Shevin, the Yale football player, and at one time member of the Republican National Committee from Minnesota.

RAILROAD MAN Didn't Like Being Starved.

A man running on a railroad has to be in good condition all the time or he is liable to do harm to himself and others.

A clear head is necessary to run a locomotive or conduct a train. Even a railroad man's appetite and digestion are matters of importance, as the clear brain and steady hand result from the healthy appetite followed by the proper digestion of food.

"For the past five years," writes a railroad man, "I have been constantly troubled with indigestion. Every doctor I consulted seemed to want to starve me to death. First I was dieted on warm water and toast until I was almost starved; then, when they would let me eat, the indigestion would be right back again.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful It Is In Preserving Health and Beauty.

Cuts Nothing To Try.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking and after eating onions and other odorous vegetables. Charcoal effectually cleans and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell you a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but, on the contrary, great benefit.

A famous physician, in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some cases a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

INUNCTION DENIED

CONSTRUCTION OF TUBERCULOSIS WARD ALLOWED.

Judge Kirby Denies the Contentions of Madison-Street Residents in City Suit.

Nathan Lippold and other Madison street residents living opposite Hospital Square were denied their application for an injunction to prevent the city from building an annex near the hospital. Judge Kirby, who has been in the square for the treatment of consumptive patients, Judge Kirby, who passed on the case, reached the conclusion that while the property may be close enough to the proposed building to cause some apprehension on the part of the plaintiffs, it nevertheless was not in such a proximity as to put them in any actual danger from the disease. This ruling will permit of the construction of the ward unless the case is appealed. The ward is to be used only temporarily for tuberculosis treatment, and the city has an opportunity to establish a regular hospital for consumption treatment outside of the city.

In the case of T. C. Tucker, who lives adjacent to the western side of Hospital square on Chestnut street, Judge Kirby recently took the opposite view and granted an injunction. However, he pointed out that in the Tucker case the proposed building was at a distance of but twenty feet from the Tucker property. This, he stated, was a very unusual case, and constituted an invasion of Tucker's rights.

In the other case, however, the house of the plaintiff Ziffert, the nearest to the proposed building, is 125 feet away. The opinion concludes as follows: "The court does not hesitate to say that it deprecates the probable necessity for locating a tuberculosis hospital in the city, where there is such apprehension and distrust for such an institution. The court, however, cannot substitute its views for the municipal discretion. If the council had the power it would order this construction of a temporary hospital elsewhere than in the heart of the city. But, as in the former case of Tucker against the city of Louisville, a hospital is not a nuisance per se, and it is not established by the facts of this case that under the treatment such as now obtains tuberculosis is either infectious or contagious, and, consequently, unduly feared by such terms and use of the statutes."

SUIT IS TAKEN UNDER ADVISEMENT.

Argument in Case Involving 500 Acres Heard by Judge Cochran.

Maysville, Ky., Jan. 11.—Federal Judge A. M. J. Cochran has heard arguments in the case of Taylor & Crates vs. the Breckinridge Coal, Iron and Lumber Company. The case involves the title to five hundred acres of land in Boone and Knott counties, to which claimants claim title under old Virginia land grants, while defendants claim title under patents from Kentucky.

Attorneys Humphrey & Humphrey and W. B. Dixon, of Louisville; O. H. Pollard, of Jackson, and Judge Boyley of Buffalo, are the plaintiffs' attorneys, and Hazelrigg & Hazelrigg, of Frankfort, J. J. Jackson, of Jackson, and S. E. Rouse, of Covington, represent the defendants. Judge Cochran took the matter under advisement and will render a decision later.

RUBBED CHECKS WITH NEW YORK'S ELECT.

Oliver was the son of a barber. He arrived in New York with no money, no proper credentials, was welcomed heartily and became popular. He was finally exposed, however, and had to leave the city.

STRANGLED TO DEATH ON AN ELECTRIC LIGHT POLE.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Jan. 11.—A special from Knoxville, says:

Walter Jones, a sixteen-year-old school boy, met a strange death at eleven last night. He had climbed an electric light pole. Falling a short distance, one of the iron steps on the pole so caught his clothing that he hung head downward. In this position he was allowed to strangle to death while a large crowd of men and women stood about afraid to touch him, fearing that he was charged with electricity.

January is the time we close out regardless of cost or value all garments remaining unsold, no matter how great the loss. Our invariable rule is to start each season with new, fresh goods.

Despite the heavy increase in the cost of all cotton materials, you will find that we are selling beautifully made-up garments for less than you would be really called on to pay for the materials alone. A few examples of the money-saving possibilities follow:

BEST VAUDEVILLE

Promised By New Lessees of the Mary Anderson.

HOPKINS THEATER TO SUPPORT STOCK COMPANY.

ANNOUNCEMENT MADE BY INTERESTS NOW IN SADDLE.

FRIEDBERG STANDS WELL IN.

By means of a circuit which is now being organized vaudeville acts in Europe and America of the first class will be brought to Louisville and put on at the Mary Anderson Theater and vaudeville, which has been heretofore given at the Hopkins under a management that is now consolidated with that which booked the Mary Anderson, will be discontinued and instead stock companies will play there. This arrangement places the Hopkins under the control of the Anderson-Ziegler Company. The announcement was made yesterday by James L. Weed, of Cincinnati, representative of the Anderson-Ziegler Theater Company, who is in the city to arrange the details.

The circuit of which the Mary Anderson is now a part is known as the Anderson circuit and includes the Columbia Theater in Cincinnati, the Grand Opera House in Indianapolis and the Mary Anderson Theater in Louisville. This circuit is affiliated with the Orpheum circuit, embracing leading theaters in Western cities and the Keith & Porter circuit, covering leading houses in the East, also the New York Hippodrome circuit, which Mr. C. Anderson is managing, in booking acts for the Mary Anderson vaudeville artists will be sent direct from the New York Hippodrome.

The circuit is composed of the following houses among others: The Haymarket, Chicago, and the Chicago Opera House, Columbia, Cincinnati; Grand Opera House, Indianapolis; the Orpheum, San Francisco; Orpheum, Los Angeles; Orpheum, New Orleans; Orpheum, Memphis; Orpheum, Kansas City; Orpheum, St. Paul; Orpheum, Minneapolis; Orpheum, Omaha, and the Orpheum, Salt Lake City, and the New York Hippodrome and all the leading houses in the Eastern cities.

Best Vaudeville Going.

Mr. Weed said yesterday with reference to the new arrangement, "We have decided that the proper thing to do in Louisville in the matter of booking acts for the Hopkins and the Mary Anderson is to discontinue vaudeville in one of the houses and replace it with stock companies and provide a better class of vaudeville in the other. The city is an excellent one for support of the best vaudeville on the stage today and we have decided to provide it."

"The situation here, I believe, affords an excellent opportunity also for stock companies, and for this reason we have decided on that arrangement for the Hopkins. The Mary Anderson will close to-night and remain closed during next week, or until the booking can be completed. The date of opening will be announced in a few days."

Mr. Weed said that there would be considerable rearranging necessary at the Mary Anderson and that new scenery and properties will be purchased before the house is opened again.

Mr. Friedberg, manager of the Mary Anderson, received a telegram from Mr. Ziegler yesterday, saying he would be in Louisville this week. Mr. Friedberg has made up his mind to leave the theater this season that it is generally conceded that he will be retained by the new lessees in that capacity.

One Thousand Acres of Alabama Land Brings Twenty-Five Thousand Dollars.

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 11.—The home place of Charlotte Thompson, the actress of years ago, who became by marriage Charlotte Thompson Rogers, was sold today for $25,000. It is one of the finest farms of one thousand acres in the black belt. Miss Thompson grew up there and after a career on the stage came back there to live. The purchase was made by local men for farming purposes.

TRANSFER TO AVOID BEING TAXED IN SEPARATE STATES.

In order to avoid being taxed as a corporation in two States, the Hydraulic Brick Company of New Jersey has transferred all its property, amounting to thousands of dollars, to the Kentucky Brick Company of Kentucky. The factory and yards are in Jefferson county, A. J. Dumas, president of the Kentucky company, becomes the head of both corporations and C. J. Doherty the vice president.

Mr. Dumas said last night that both the Kentucky and New Jersey factories have been controlled by the same capital for a number of years, and that the only reason for the change was to avoid being taxed as two separate corporations. The two companies will henceforth be known by the same names as heretofore, only the New Jersey company will become part or branch, in a legal way, of the Kentucky company. The general office is located at 2304 Twelfth street.

POULTRY SHOW READY TO OPEN TO-MORROW

ONE OF BIGGEST EXHIBITIONS EVER PROMISED.

BEST BREEDS AND BEST OF BREEDS COMPETE.

WILL CONTINUE THIS WEEK.

The final preparation for the first annual show of the Louisville Poultry and Pet Stock Association, which opens to-morrow morning and continues throughout next week, was completed yesterday afternoon at Phoenix Hill Hall. All of the cages and pens, which cover a floor space of 120x125 feet, have been installed, and when the doors are thrown open to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock everything will be in readiness.

All entries closed yesterday and the 1,000 chickens, 500 pigeons, 200 dogs, numerous odd birds, guinea pigs and the like will be on exhibition. All kinds of pigeons are entered in the pigeon department, which is exceptionally well filled and all varieties known to fanciers are represented. In the humor classes are some of the champions of their breed.

Some of the best-known bench show winners in the country are entered in this department. Poultry shapers from all the surrounding counties are attracted to the poultry department. Interest is stimulated by the large number of special and club prizes donated in addition to the regular offerings of the association. Fanciers from all parts of the country have brought their choicest birds and competition in this department is expected to be very keen. The show will be open every day this week from 9 a. m. until 10 p. m. The orphans of the various institutions in the city will visit the show Wednesday and Thursday between the hours of 1 and 5 p. m. There will also be a special day for the school children, but this has not been decided upon as yet.

The judges in the different departments will be, for poultry, D. M. Owens, of Nashville, Tenn.; R. E. Jones, of Nashville, Tenn.; Frank L. Shaw, of Indianapolis. For pigeons, George Ewald and Charles Ellsworth, both of Cincinnati; and for dogs and pet stock, Al G. Eberhardt, of Camp Denio-on-the-Ozark.

THREE ODD FELLOW LODGES EFFECT A CONSOLIDATION.

This consolidation has been contemplated for some time, but was only consummated this past week. Boone Lodge is the oldest lodge west of the Allegheny, and as the name implies, was

NEW CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING AS IT WILL LOOK WHEN REMODELING IS FINISHED.

The new Christian Science church building as it will appear when the project of remodeling the building at 1220 Third avenue, which is now progressing, is completed, is presented above. The location is an ideal one and when the improvements are finished the effect, which is to be colonial in style, will be most pleasing. This building, however, is regarded by the Christian Scientists as temporary merely, for they confidently assert that if the experience at other places are to be repeated in Louisville it is a question of only a few years when their congregation will have so increased as to demand larger and more expensive quarters.

Christian Science has been known in Louisville many years. The First Church of Christ, Scientist, was incorporated in 1898, and for a time there were two separate congregations in the city, but they united within the past year or so and hold regular Sunday and midweek services at The Rosemont, 748 Fourth avenue, where a free public reading room is maintained in charge of a librarian and is open daily, except Sunday, from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. There all inquiries and those interested in Christian Science are cordially invited to visit during the hours indicated, where they will be furnished a comfortable seat and abundance of Christian Science literature to read.

JUDGE PRYOR OFF TO TEXAS TO REGAIN HEALTH.

Judge Joseph Pryor, of the Criminal branch, Jefferson Circuit Court, left yesterday over the Illinois Central railroad for San Antonio, Texas, where he will spend several weeks in order to fully recover from the attack of throat trouble from which he has suffered for some time. Though Judge Pryor has nearly regained his normal health, his physician has advised that he had better not undertake his labors in the Criminal Court again until he has had a sufficient opportunity to recover his strength. Judge Pryor spent the Christmas vacation at the home of his father, Judge William S. Pryor, at New Castle. He returned to his apartments at the Louisville Hotel on Wednesday. His family will continue their residence at the hotel until Judge Pryor returns.

NEED NOT KNOW

Dog Doesn't Have To Recognize Unlicensed Peddler.

HUMOROUS POINT DECIDED BY JUDGE O'DOHERTY.

MOTORMAN WHO COULD NOT CONTROL CAR LOSES.

EIGHT DECREES OF DIVORCE.

The law doesn't expect a dog to be able to tell the difference between a licensed sewing machine peddler and one who has no license. This was the substance of an opinion which the conditions of a case before Judge O'Doherty made it necessary for him to deliver at joint session yesterday, and which aroused the members of the bar to a prolonged outburst of merriment. The question involved had been put up to the court by the suit brought by S. L. Hopper against John U. Gorman, a market gardener.

Hopper had called at Gorman's home to inquire if there was a sewing machine to be repaired. All the overalls were out working in the garden. Hopper beat first on the front door, then on the back door, and finally on the side wall. The Gorman dog, which was chained to the kennel, became so excited at Hopper's actions that he broke his chain and attacked him. Hopper says in his petition for $1,000 that he was painfully bitten. Among the pleas raised in the defendant's answer it was set out that the plaintiff was an unlicensed sewing machine peddler. The dog law of the State provided that the owner of a dog cannot be held liable for any injuries he may inflict on other persons who come upon the premises during the night or during the day time and engage in any unlawful act. The dog, according to the defendant's claim, had a right to know the difference between a licensed sewing machine peddler and one who was not, and because he did not have a license to peddle sewing machines. However, Judge O'Doherty held that the dog was not supposed to know the difference between a man who was and one who was not a licensed sewing machine peddler; that the unlawful act of the alleged invader must be something that the dog can better understand. In the question, however, the defendant claims the plaintiff escaped without injury and that he should not have come into the back yard any way, because he had been warned of the dog's act of the dog.

Hair-at-Law Upheld.
Disposition of a legacy of $2,000, which Mrs. M. Agnes Bohlen bequeathed to an insane nephew was involved in a decision made by Judge Miller yesterday at joint session. The defendant was left with the provision that it should be paid to the nephew when he recovered his mind. However, he died in Central Asylum and the question arose as to what should be done with it. Mrs. Bohlen had left her nephew, George Schroeder, and two married nieces, each a special cash bequest, one receiving $5,000 and the others $2,000 each. The rest of her estate she gave to Abel Bohlen, a cousin of her husband.

So when the lunatic nephew died it was a question of whether the $2,000 went to the niece and nephew, who were the heirs-at-law of the testatrix, or whether it passed to Abel Bohlen, the residuary legatee under her will. It has heretofore been decided that when the heir-at-law of a testatrix is what is known as a "barren" whereupon it was decided for Abel Bohlen that Mrs. M. Agnes Bohlen, during her lifetime had given her niece and nephew $1,000 apiece as Christmas presents and also other sums. It was argued that these amounts offset their claim to the $2,000. Judge Miller decided, however, that these sums made no difference in their interest in the $2,000.

Harrington Petition Upheld.
The demurrer made by the defendant in the case of James Harrington against Mrs. Luella Carter, wife of Garland Carter, upon the ground that the petition of the plaintiff failed to state a cause of action, was overruled yesterday by Judge O'Doherty. The plaintiff, charging that the defendant had slandered him, had brought suit asking for $25,000 in damages. He avers that Mrs. Carter went to Mrs. Harrington and told her that the plaintiff was an improper man, and that Mrs. Emma Morris, the defendant's sister, had been conducting herself in a highly improper manner with Mr. James Morris. The defendant had moved the plaintiff to court, upon which several charges of slander and slander made in the petition upon which to try the case. Judge O'Doherty held, however, that the plaintiff need not do this, as all charges went to state a case of slander.

Two Wills Probated.

The following wills were probated yesterday in the County Court: That of Mrs. M. R. Warfield, written in December, 1905, in which she leaves her property to her daughter, Anna Warfield, who is named executrix without bond. That of James Fogarty, dated July 3, 1907, in which he leaves all his property to John Fogarty, Meliss Tindell and Rev. C. P. Raffo. The bequest to Father Raffo is to pay for masses. Julia and Sadie Fogarty are given a house on Madison street, between Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth. The rest of the estate goes to Mary Vogel and Anna Louise Reisinger. Sadie Vogel is named executrix without bond.

Motorman Adjudged Careless.

In the case of Charles Kirby against the Louisville Railway Company, who had sued for $5,000 because of injuries he received while employed as a motorman of the defendant in a collision between a car he was driving and a wagon, Judge O'Doherty held that the admitted contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff was sufficient to deny him standing in court. Kirby said in his petition that his car was in such a defective condition as made it impossible for him to control it. This being the case, Judge O'Doherty held he should not have consented to have run it through the streets and to have made it a menace to the public and a danger to himself.

The funeral of Anthony Wiser, one of the oldest and best-known residents of Jefferson county, who died at his home near Pleasure Ridge Park Friday night, will be held at 10 o'clock this morning at St. Anthony's church at Pleasure Ridge Park.
Mr. Wiser was better known as "Squire" Wiser, a title which clung to him because he had formerly occupied a position as Magistrate in the county. Until the outbreak of the Civil War he had been a Democrat, but at the very beginning of the conflict he expressed strong abolitionist sentiments and took an active part in politics. From that time until his death he had been a strong Republican, and during the recent campaign, although over eighty-six years of age and in ill health, he had worked vigorously for that ticket.
Mr. Wiser had been in failing health for six months, and his death was expected. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Margaret Wiser, aged eighty-four years, and by four children, John, Alexander and Fred Wiser, and Miss Julia Wiser.

KNOW IT ALL

Kentucky Women Steeped In Intricacies of Politics.

EXCITED GIRL CASTS VOTE IN DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS.

SOCIAL LIFE IN CAPITAL DURING THE SESSION.

BRIDGE PARTIES POPULAR.

[Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.]
Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 10.—Last Monday night at the Democratic caucus a seventeen-year-old schoolgirl was keeping tab on the back of an old envelope (loaned by her father) of the votes received by the various candidates. An old man—old, at least, in point of service to his party, sat watching the girl as she kept up a steady fire of questions and talked gravely and lucidly of the various candidates' prospects for nomination. Her conversation with the ways and means of the politicians moved the gentleman in question to ask her "where in the world she got her information."

"Visibly embarrassed," she replied that "she didn't know—she supposed she always knew it."

That statement was a fact. The women of Kentucky are born and bred in the Democratic party, so to speak; they know politics without a starting question. It is born in them. This does not argue that the women of the proud old Commonwealth are less modest or more daring than their counterparts of other States. It does argue that at some period in her life her father, brother, husband or sweetheart has at some time in his life "been in politics."

Helped Swell the Majority.

In the political fervor last Tuesday night, when things began to look like a "mix-up," the Speaker called for those who voted "aye" to stand up to be counted, and one woman, who had grown interested in the caucus, stepped upon her feet in double-quick time to the infinite amusement of her friends, who have unmercifully gazed her since. A late New York Herald correspondent, writing of the New York caucus, said that all day nothing but wine flowed at the famous hotels and restaurants. "Nothing but wine," was the slogan of those people in the great metropolis—"Nothing but wine."

So at this time in the history of Kentucky there is nothing but politics. We read politics, we talk politics, we drink on politics in lieu of wine. We forget Germans and card parties for political reasons, and desert our friends to attend the caucuses.

A Model Spell-Binder.

If a disinterested on-looker could happen in at one of these stirring meetings in the famous old legislative halls, where for over half a century such orators as Clay, Breckinridge, Crittenden, Lindsay and some dozens of others equally famous have held their auditors spellbound with their matchless eloquence, and listen to a few speeches of the "gentleman of somewhere or other," it would be unusually edifying. Very few young orators "speak right on," they strive after effect.

In the Senate caucus the other night (held in the room of the Court of Appeals) your correspondent occupied an enviable window seat and while gazing around the room lined with the paintings of noted Kentucky jurists, whose eloquence had freed many a timid and cowering soul, or sent to gallows some outrageous criminal, were lost for the nonce to things temporal till the words of one of the orators broke the stillness and the following soul-inspiring and deeply pathetic verses floated out, smote upon my slowly returning senses:

"I love you, mother," said little John; Then forgetting his work he went on, And he was off to the other side, Leaving his mother the wood to bring.

"I love you, mother," said little Fan; "To-day I will help you all I can; How glad I am to help you, now, So she rocked the baby fast asleep."

"I love you, mother," again they said, These little children going to bed; How do you think the world will be, Which of them really loved her best?"

Shades of Henry Clay! the pictured faces of Lindsay, Knott and Carlisle remained immovable. We raised our own eyes and encountered others—a few others, with tears running down their cheeks—some people are not affected by great sorrow or joy, and not being able to control our own rising emotions, we hastily left the room—to be quite accurate, we "kidded;" the word is used advisedly.

The words here may not be perfectly correct; it has been many a day since we recited them or since one McGuffey placed them in his Third Reader.

DISAPPEARANCE OF PIANO CAUSES TROUBLE

Mrs. Fleischman Narrowly Missed Being Sent to Jail by Judge Kirby.

It was resolved by Sheriff Scholl and his deputies yesterday, when they managed to serve an attachment on Mrs. O. R. Fleischman, of Fifteenth and Market streets, after some three weeks of vigilance, that they had caught a Tartar. Judge Kirby, before whom the case was pending, may have come to the same conclusion himself, though he hesitated from expressing himself on the subject. Three years ago, to the misfortune of everyone connected with the affair, Mrs. Fleischman conceived the notion of buying a piano. That is, either she or her husband became possessed of the idea, or both of them. At any rate, she bought an instrument from the J. B. Bradford Piano Company, for which part payment was made.

The continued and weary efforts to collect the balance has appeared to have made a piano a sore topic with Mrs. Fleischman ever since. She has been separated from her husband, who now lives in Denver. It has been in vain that Mrs. Fleischman has sought the aid of her friends to help her pay the balance.

One day while Mrs. Fleischman was out of the piano, according to her story, mysteriously disappeared and has never been seen since. It is the belief of Morris Gifford, representing the plaintiff company, that she has some knowledge of its whereabouts, or if not of the identity of the person who took it, and what disposition was made of it. An attachment had been asked to bring the woman into court and compel her to tell what she knew about the piano.

She took on a highly tragic air and swore that she knew absolutely nothing about it; that she "washed her hands on that piano" when it went out of the house; and did not want to know what had become of it. She declared that when she returned and saw it was gone she asked no questions and never found out what had become of it.

However, this did not sound exactly reasonable either to Morris Gifford or Judge Kirby. The woman was questioned further, but became greatly excited in her denials. She said that if she were put in jail and allowed to stay there until she died she could never tell anything about that piano. It was finally determined to summon her daughter and ask her if she knew anything of the piano. The woman was also told to come to court on Wednesday, the day set for the hearing.

She airily answered as she strode toward the door that she didn't know whether she would or not. At the command of Judge Kirby the woman was stopped and brought back. She was reprimanded for the use of her language and told to hold herself subject to the orders of the court. Judge Kirby hesitated to send the woman to jail because of her three children.

COLISEUM ANNOUNCES POPULARITY CONTEST.

Each Person in Attendance at Rink on Tuesday Night Will Be Allowed to Cast One Ballot.

Another of the popularity contests which have proved so popular this season will be given at the Coliseum Tuesday night. The event will be for the feminine contingent of the patrons and the awards of gold will be made to the persons selected by popular vote. Each person in attendance will be allowed to cast one ballot. Ability at skating will play no part in the event and any person over fifteen years of age is eligible.

The prizes which will be awarded in the "Carnival of All Nations" will be placed on exhibition at the rink next week. They are easily the handsomest ever offered by the management on a similar occasion. The carnival will take place the latter part of the month.

Internal Revenue Collections.

The internal revenue collections yesterday were as follows: Lists, $24.64; beer, $50; whisky, $40.12; cigars, $23.95; tobacco, $5,565.20; special tax stamps, $25; case stamps, $15.50; total, $7,631.77.

the smallness of the town. After locating in Augusta myself, I got into the office of a publisher, and, if he had been taken it was, would have merited it with his own publication. I was not, however, able to get a good many other close calls at this period.

At the end the situation cleared up in this way: I gave my claim against the house, amounting to something more than $1,000, to the publisher, Mr. Argory. Then there began such a struggle as no man is justified in undertaking.

I had no capital, and no means of raising any. A bad phase of the matter was, that the publisher had not had been received, and the money used up. These subscriptions had to be carried on credit, and the publisher printed and mailed every week to the end of the term paid for. No one had been able to get the money, and it was possible that I could pull it through, if I could get no credit anywhere. The publisher was the only one who had per dollar for the printer, and in fact profit of one hundred dollars a week. I was not to be paid until the end of the fall and disappointment, with never a vacation, never a day for play, and never a day to rest, was mine. I was not until I finally realized that The Argosy was actually bringing me in a clean hundred dollars a week, and I was now a real profit, for the advertising bills were not yet paid.

I set out my story in the winter. I should have said I began it in the winter and went on with it as it was in the winter, and then in the spring and summer.

The success of the spring advertising campaign was the turning point in the fall, and beginning with the reading season I threw myself into a clean, healthy building up of my life. Its tenacity and ferocity poured a new life's work into a few months.

Working at Awful Pressure.

My first move was to enlarge The Argosy. I had a staff of 100 men. It alone added 20,000 to the circulation; 8,000 more a week, instead of 10,000 dragged out at night after the awful notices of the day—a complete switch to the new world of the world of fancy, where by sheer will for the first time I was able to control what I wanted myself to produce. The copy was not only better, but it was more and what a strain of vital energy and human endurance.

At the close of this campaign, early in May, 1887, The Argosy had reached the splendid circulation of 115,000 copies, and was making a profit of $1,500 a week. But my ambition was to build bigger and to build stronger.

Up Against a Stone Wall.

With the opening of the next reading season in the fall, I spent $20,000 more, and then abruptly stopped my advertising campaign. Something was wrong. I didn't know what it was, but I assumed that the trouble was with juveniles.

promoting the Lido when I met an old college chum. She was rather anxious to get me to the Lido, so I went and asked her what I was doing. As a matter of fact I wasn't doing anything, so she said, "Well, I'll take dressme walks and doing without my breakfast and late suppers, drinking a horrible nasty milk, and taking a horrible pain medicine." My mother-in-law was rather interested in knowing more about the success that I was having with the Lido, so she said, "Well, I was astonished to learn that I had only lost ten ounces in three weeks." She said, "I wouldn't want to suffer all these deprivations and do the hardest kind of work, which you really do, for the Lido." I said, "Well, I'm taking Marmola Prescription?" She said, "Almost a pound a day and not losing any weight, and I'm not taking any squares and my bottle, and I don't pass anything in the way of eating and drinking." # Civilian Leaders of The Confederacy.

Thomas S. Bocock.

As a Peacemaker.

He was of a most kind and genial disposition and brought sunshine wherever he went. It is said that during his service in Congress he was frequently called upon to act as pacificator between other members and bring about terms of adjustment. It is the list of Beatitudes as summed up by the Saviour of mankind in the Sermon on the Mount, which the "blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God." What higher commission could possibly be bestowed upon mortal man?

As a specimen of his style as a speaker at the House of Representatives

"The speech of my friend and colleague, like all his performances, and perhaps, in a greater degree than any of them heretofore, was able and ingenious. The onward sweep of his logic was as regular and as graceful as the charge of the Light Brigade at Balaklava; but I say, with all respect, that my humble judgment, it led to no more useful or valuable result. What was the purpose and intention of the speech of my colleague? One might have supposed for a moment that it was to show the members of the House the House the fact that in accepting the Kansas-Nebraska Bill he was not a traitor to his constituents. It was entitled, I think, if I had been satisfied that this was the purpose and intention of the speech, to have been called upon to reply to it. But in view of the entire speech and all the circumstances, it was manifest that such a reply cannot be maintained. Then, Mr. Chairman, could it be that my worthy colleague intended to show the House upon to expend so much ingenuity and ability; and to give us so fine a display of his talents, and to show us that, in doing that he foresaw all the evils which have occurred in Kansas, and that he was not a traitor to his constituents of the Kansas-Nebraska Bill? Sir, he who claims for himself the character of a traitor to his constituents, and who, as we see, seeks a reputation which, in my humble judgment, is by no means

Speaker of Confederate Congress.

While Mr. Broeck was a member of the Thirty-sixth Congress he became a prominent candidate for the speakership of the House of Representatives. He was elected to the high office by the Democratic caucus, his principal competitor in the race was a New England man, and he was embarrassed by the development of the fact during the contest that he had recommended a book called "The Impending Crisis of the South," published in North Carolina. After a long and arduous struggle the original candidate was elected, and the result of the contest resulted in the choice of Mr. Pennington of New Jersey, who was nominated on the forty-fourth ballot. Mr. Broeck was elected to the Confederate Government Mr. Broeck was elected Speaker of the House of Representatives of the Confederate States of America when it is remembered that among the members were such men as William L. G. Davis, W. G. Velje, J. M. Smith and John A. Glimmer of North Carolina, besides many others who might very well have been chosen, it is not surprising that it was preeminently fitted for the place. He was quick, alert, conservative, and a man of great energy and determination. It has been difficult, if not impossible to find a man in the membership more admirably fitted for the position. It was a difficult and arduous task.

How Hyomei Does Its Work in Curing Catarrh.

Nature's remedy for catarrhal troubles is the oils and balsams found in Hyomel. It is a specific, not a cure-all. It has but one mission, the cure of catarrh.

The natural way of curing a disease is always the scientific way, and the scientific way of curing catarrh is the simple way, with Hyomel.

Catarrh is a germ disease and can be cured only by using Hyomel, the treatment that reaches and destroys all catarrhal germs.

Breathed through the neck pocket in the inhaler that comes with every outfit. The germ-killing Hymel is in the air, reaching the remote air cells of the nose, throat and lungs, going after the disease germs wherever present, destroying them and preventing their growth, thus making certain you're really healthy.

There is no dangerous stomach dose when Hymel is used. It is solely a inhalation treatment, prepared especially to kill the catarrhal germs, and is safe for use in children. The Hymel Company and Taylor-Isaacs Drug Company sell it under an actual guarantee to refund the money if it does not give satisfaction.

Mining of Barytes a New Industry In Central Kentucky

Nicholsville, Ky., Jan. 11. (Special.)—A comparatively new industry for Kentucky and one that will add materially to the wealth of the State is the mining of barytes, together with the processing and bleaching processes that prepare it for the consumer.

The first barytes mine in the United States, and the only one in this State, is in Madison county, N. Y., in 1860. Later a mill was erected in New Haven, Conn., for processing the barytes into chemicals for barytes were shown under minor minerals and a total of 2,300,000 lbs. were produced in 1900 in Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia. During the next ten years Illinois was added to the list, and in 1910 Kentucky followed. South Carolina and Tennessee became producers.

After the war the barytes began to be developed in Kentucky. At that time a mine was opened in Crittenden county, and since that time the output of a good quality have been discovered in various counties of the Bluegrass region. Limestone, which is so essential to the growth of bluegrass, also has barytes.

upon the presiding officer of the body like the House of Representatives.

Mr. Coocock was opposed to the secession of the State. He exerted all his great powers and used all his much-vaunted eloquence to prevent a declaration between the discordant, beligerent sections of the Union, but after many efforts he failed.

He then espoused the cause of the Confederacy with all the earnestness of his nature, and made his influence in the war of words a contribution of the war of arms, believing, as he held to be sacred and inviolable, that all that he did be sacred and inviolable.

After the termination of the war Mr. Coocock devoted himself to the relief of his people from the material and moral evils of the war, the trying ordeal of reconstruction through which

As a rule, it is found only in limestone sections, or where limestone has undergone metamorphism and has been broken up and decomposed to a considerable depth, leaving a clay-like material in which the fragments of rock and fossils are encountered close under the ground roots; sometimes it is necessary to dig deep to obtain it.

Heavy spar formed by water and vegetable matter percolating through beds of limestone rock and depositing crystals of calcium carbonate, so that it may find. Ordinarily, barytes would be found under limestone, but in this case, the latter decomposed and was changed into earthy, so that the barytes is often found closer to the surface than the limestone. The barytes depend upon the character of this formation. As above stated, it is in limestone, but in this case, it is in the former, it may be from three inches to twelve or fifteen feet wide, in some places with a depth of from three to five feet. In other places, it is in fissures, there is no limit to its depth. There are, however, no true fissures, but rather cracks, and the barytes in the ore being found in pockets, or small

Reconstruction Horrors.

Who can tell the countless horrors experienced by the people of the South during that memorable period? It was infinitely worse than the war itself, although the war cost millions of treasure and hundreds of thousands of lives.

Besides his other great gifts, Mr.
Beecker enjoyed the reputation among his contemporaries of a consummate orator. He could move an audience might be termed semi-fusures—that is, a combination of fissure and pocket. The ore is of a bluish gray color, and of variable width. The ore is not found in a pure state, but as a compound—barium and fluorine, and lead carbonate. The ore is often found in association with iron, silica, lead and zinc. Unfortunately, the lead and zinc are not in paying quantities, and the barium is of too low strength to reduce the quality of the barytes.

The ore was first used only as an adulterant in white lead, but is now known to possess qualities that make it valuable as a pigment, and when used in combination with white lead and zinc white, these qualities appear to advantage.

He was in the habit of telling a amusing anecdote about his experience in the case of a candidate for the office of a candidate for Congress. Bishop Bowman was a recognized leader in the Dunkard Church. His influence was potential and his congregation always voted as he directed. Mr. Enoch had as his competitor a gentleman of high standing in the community. Some what addicted to drink. Some of Bishop Bowman's friends called upon him, Enoch, adding as the reason that his competitor was in the habit of ex-

Madstone Cherished As Heirloom
By Mayor Baugh, of London, Ky.

London, Ky., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—The picture herewith represents a madstone owned by Mayor Charles R. Baugh, of London. The stone is olive green, about the size of an inch square, very porous, and originally had the property of William Baugh, born in Virginia, near Petersburg, 1755, who was the great grandfather of the present mayor. The stone was much larger, for the old Virginia law divided it before his death between his sons Abraham and Thomas. The latter alleged paranoias for mad dog bites were found in the vitals of dogs which he had killed. The stone has been applied many times to wounds made by dogs afflicted with hydrophobia, and has cured them, so that no one applying the madstone has ever died from hydrophobia. No fee is charged for its use, but the owner has to pay for the use of the stone, but because of the value placed upon it the stone is always required to come to him. To-day many hymns as well as physicians are in vogue for the cure of a madstone. Whether Baugh madstone will cure hydrophobia is a present question. It does not undertake to cure rabies, but it cures the effects of a madstone. Whether

When able to be made to Mr. Bockock's competitor, that he was in the habit of drinking too much, the bishop, hearing the conversation, inquired if Mr. Bockock ever drank, to which the reply was made "Oh, yes, he drinks, but he drinks just right."

A Bishop Who Drank Right.

When enjoying the "fish fry" the members of the party became a little hilarious, and among them the bishop. When he was summoned to appear before his church to answer for his shortcoming, he made defense upon the ground that the members had told him that while Mr. Eocock drank, and he did not, and on the occasion of the fish fry he only drank whenever Mr. Eocock drank. The result of the trial was that he was unanimously acquitted of the charge.

While Mr. Eocock was Speaker of the House of Representatives there was a grand quarrel between himself and a certain bishop of the Methodist Church. Whenever the bishop came to Richmond he was always invited by the Speaker to open the proceedings of the House with prayer, and he responded with alacrity. He always prayed in a moderate manner, saying, "God be with Thy servants, and with all those who are with Thy families at home, be with our brethren now in the field." At a recent session he was present when he came down the aisle on his way out when he was met by Gen. Bonham, of South Carolina.

"Bishop, I couldn't help this morning while you were praying so fervent for our brethren in the field, muttering in by way of mental intimation to give the Yankees blanketed blank," to which the bishop replied, "Ah, Bonham, you are a good fellow."

While F. W. M. Holliday was Governor of Virginia he appointed Mr. Bonham to the Board of Visitors of the University of Virginia. Mr. A. H. H. Stuart was rector of the University at that time, and he was full to listen to their conversation, and they detailed their experiences while serving in the House of Representatives. They took a decided interest in the affairs of the university, and will be long recognized as earnest and ardent friends of the southern education.

No sore or ulcer can be healed by the application of any external cause, and the open, discharging sore, must be treated by the application of the cure to eat deeper into the surrounding tissue until circulation discharges its impurities out of the head of the trouble, and drives the impurities into the open, and the cure is complete. Then at this rich, purified blood, the disease place the healing begins. # OBSTINATE ULCERS MAY LEAD TO CANCER

There is no cure, at first, in the appearance of a cancerous and common ulcer, and for this reason every sore that is obstinate or slow in healing should excite suspicion, for the sore is nothing more than the external evidence of a polluted blood, and if allowed to remain may degenerate into Cancer. Efforts to heal the ulcer by means of salves, plasters and other external remedies always result in failure, because such treatment can have no possible effect on the blood, where the truly germicidal and purifying S. S. S. is carried through the circulation to the place. No sore or ulcer can exist without a predisposing internal cause, and the open, discharging, flesh or festering old sore will continue to eat deeper into the surrounding flesh as long as a polluted, germ-infected circulation discharges its impurities into it. S. S. S. goes to the fountain-head of the trouble, and drives out the germ-producing poisons and morbid impurities which keep the ulcer open. Then as this rich, purified blood goes to the diseased place the healing begins, all suppuration ceases, the inflammation gradually leaves, new tissue and healthy flesh are formed, and soon the sore is permanently cured. S. S. S. is made entirely of roots and herbs of a healing, cleansing nature, and unlike mineral medicines, which often do great damage to the delicate parts of the system, S. S. ## PRESIDENT LATE

"Scandalously" So, and He Leaps Upstairs.

WHITE HOUSE ELEVATOR NOT FOR HIM.

MISS ETHEL ROOSEVELT USES
BOTH SIDES OF SADDLE.

SOCIAL NOTES OF CAPITAL.

[Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.]
Washington, Jan. 10.—"I'm scandalously late!" spluttered the President. "Scandalously" is a pet word of his. He is late with the same athletic force that the rest of us employ in "scat" to an unwelcome feline. When Mr. Roosevelt qualifies any situation with "scandalously" or "scandalously," the word bolts through his flashing teeth like a bullet, scattering spray hither and yonder.

The particular trouble on this occasion was that the "Missus" was waiting for her liege above stairs, all ready with accompanying satellites for the grand descent that opened the ball for a big affair. The President, who never has an unclaimed moment on his hands, had been detained a trifle at his office. He is usually the soul of promptness. He came bounding, hatless, like a schoolboy, along the covered terrace that connects the mansion with the business offices; sprang through the glass doors that flew open at his cyclonic approach, at the end of the long, transverse corridor of the White House, discharged his catapaulted ejaculation, smiling and apologetic as he dashed by a cluster of newspaper men, all women but one, poor thing, and sprinted up the steps to "Mamma" like a two-year-old. He had the aspect, luckily, of having been already tubbed and shaved and stuffed into his Sunday clothes. So there wasn't much to do but to slick a gardenia in his buttonhole, scramble for a clean handkerchief and get into the van of the procession. The royal couple never come down the stairs in public without a regal retinue, a cloud of witnesses and the crash of the Marine Band. There is an elevator at the White House, but it is seldom used except by the aged and infirm. The Roosevelts have too much surplus steam to work off to need a "lift."

Miss Roosevelt happened to carry on that occasion a fragrant nosegay of simple white narcissus, mistletoe, holly and sweet peas. The "First Lady" patronized all the positive and negative of state in turn; but her prime favorites are orchids—the pinky purple kind. She always presides at her husband's levees with her bouquets, always exactly alike, but different each time.

Miss Roosevelt.

Miss Roosevelt is mingling in society without definite intention. Both at the New Year's and the old-fashioned levees, surrounded by a bunch of young girl friends, she was much in evidence among the gossamer, although not so old-fashioned as her riding habit, entirely grown up now, and she looks as old as Alice.

Miss Ethel, inheriting the paternal knack for knowing an opportunist, she sees one, upon each State occasion at the White House, utilizes the gorgeous music of the Marine band for her lusher purposes. Each time, accompanied by her boy and girl acquaintances, she inaugurates an impromptu ball upstairs, where the strains of Strauss flourish exultantly. If the public down below lock steps into the presidential presence to the cadence of more twosteps than to any other brand of festive strains, it is very likely due to the fact that sweet Ethel overhead has sneaked a surreptitious appeal to Lieutenant Santelmann now and then for certain favorites in the interest of her dance. Baby Quentin, too, has developed into quite a carpet knight and a squire of dames. He is an active, lean little chap like all the Roosevelt boys, gallant to the girls at his school, to whom he frequently carries flowers, and an ardent tripper of the light fantastic. He is also an earnest young musician, straining diligently on the piano daily. Miss Ethel has a private piano of her own. Her present musical instructor is a woman, Miss Young, of Washington, who has taught all the Roosevelt children. It is expected that Miss Roosevelt will study abroad later.

Rides Astride.

Although the custom is not universal with Washington equestriennes, Miss Roosevelt, who is an ardent horsewoman, rides on her own horse, a bay, named Cross-saddle, which she has achieved special popularity, however, among the smart folk of the capital. The Misses Sheridan and Mrs. V. S. Grant, and Root, all experts, mount in the good old-fashioned feminine way, to which the petulant of approval is beginning to back. Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Ken have never ridden astride, nor Mrs. Longworth. Miss Ethel looks piquante and debonair in her riding togs of khaki with soft, soldier hat.

Almost any afternoon at a little after 4 one may see a presidential carriage, rosetted in tri-colors, drawn up under the porte cochere of the White House, waiting. Suddenly the double glass doors of the mansion are flung open with a flourish. Something portentous is about to happen. The President bounces into view, like a bustling Hamlet, in a voluminous black cape lined with purple and a black slouch hat. His riding gear is underneath. He is to meet his mount on the secluded outskirts of Georgetown. Frequently Mr. Roosevelt is accompanied by his young daughter, who, as often as not, has donned a simple black sailor hat with a Roman scarf. The President bows to every human soul he meets on route.

The Vice President's Mother.

An interesting guest at recent White House functions—she was in the Blue Room on New Year's day and at the diplomatic—has been the mother of the Vice President. The senior Mrs. Fairbanks is a diminutive little woman, genial and motherly, who hardly reaches half way along the perpetually proportioned of her unusually tall son, her grandsons and her handsome granddaughters. Mrs. Fairbanks, Mr. Fred Fairbanks, Mrs. Fairbanks made a quaint and attractive picture at a recent presidential affair. She was simply made gown of black satin and some fine old lace.

Curiously inconspicuous for one so closely allied to such exalted rank is the President's sister-in-law, Miss Carver, who, after a long European absence, has returned to the White House for the winter. Miss Carver, Mrs. Roosevelt's senior by a number of years, bears a remarkable facial resemblance to her notable sister. In physique, however, she is much thinner and less robust. Miss Carver, a devoted artist, cares much more for her brush and palette than for the gayeties of life. She spends most of her time at her studio in Rome. Neither she nor Mrs. Roosevelt go in for the spectacular.

Great January Sale of Linens and White Goods

The Supreme Money-Saving Opportunity of the Entire Year—
Lavish Assortments—Dependable Qualities—Superb Values.

TOMORROW we inaugurate our annual January sale of Linens, Cottons and White Goods.

This event brings to the housewives of Louisville and vicinity unparalleled opportunities to pack the linen closet at absolutely the lowest prices quoted on dependable linens and other white fabrics.

Circumstances have combined to make this the greatest linen sale in our history, from the viewpoint of value-giving. Months ago we began scouring the linen markets with a view to bringing together the cream of the world's products at minimum cost to you. We took advantage of every turn of the market to secure worthy merchandise underpriced.

Then the unexpected happened—a change in the management of our Linen Department. A new broom sweeps clean, they say. Be that as it may, justice demands that the new manager, Mr. Drautman, be given free rein, and he naturally wishes to start with a clean slate. He has carefully gone through the entire stock, using the blue pencil freely, in an effort to reduce the stocks.

Mr. Henry Drautman

Popularly known to the shopping public as Mr. "Henry," who has been connected with the Linen Department of Kaufman-Straus Company for twenty-two years, the greater part of that period as buyer and manager, has severed his connection with that concern, and has become associated with us as manager of our Linen and Wash Goods Departments.

Mr. "Henry" will take pleasure in placing his valuable experience at the disposal of his friends and patrons, and our friends and patrons, at all times.

There's no telling when—if ever—such surprisingly low prices will be quoted again. Surely at present market quotations we couldn't duplicate these values. In fact, many of the items below are priced cheaper than they can be imported to-day. So take timely warning and supply every need for months to come.

Practically Everything in Our Linen Dept. is Marked at Special Prices for This Sale.

Inventory is Over---Now for a Sweeping Clearance

For the past ten days we have busied ourselves with taking a thorough inventory. What a mountain of work it is—counting and measuring and figuring. But of course it's absolutely essential to good store-keeping. This year inventory has brought to light a great multitude of odds and ends, little lots of this and that, styles to be discontinued, broken-size assortments and the like, that must be disposed of instantly.

We have instructed department heads to cut prices without regard to profit in order to clear decks in a hurry. We prefer to have the cash in our tills rather than keep these little dribbles on our shelves. So this clearance sale, that starts to-morrow, brings wonderful values to those who respond quickly.

DEBUT COSTS FORTUNE.

[Philadelphia Special to Washington Herald.]
With free song birds fluttering about in the foliage and goldfish in the fountain, all ready to be hooked by fair women, Miss Dorothy Randolph made her debut at a ball given at the Bellevue-Stratford by her father, Philip S. Randolph, who owns most of Narragansett Pier and much of Lakewood.
As to the cost of the affair, conservative estimates place it away above anything that has gone before, even exceeding the famous butterfly ball of Miss Paul.
The scene of Miss Randolph's formal introduction to society was a woodland, with rustic bridges over real pools and imitation ones made with mirrors, surrounded by plants and flowers. Fountains were flowing, canaries warbling in the foliage, and all kinds of rare fish swam in the ponds and streams.
Twelve hundred guests were unknown to the hostess. Departing from precedents, the birds were carefully handled and none was hurt. Even the goldfish, that were hooked were thrown back into the water.

CHEAP MEDICAL SERVICE.

[Chicago Record-Herald.]
Working girls who are members of labor unions can have medical advice at the payment of 10 cents a year. This arrangement has been made by the Women's Trade Union League, which announces that Dr. Varron Yarros of Hull House, had been appointed medical adviser. Dr. Yarros has set aside Monday and Thursday evenings and Sunday mornings for these consultations. It is not expected that the nominal charge of 10 cents will pay Dr. Yarros for her time, but the league will make up the difference.

ORGANIZATION.

Under Consideration By the Home Mission Associations.

WOULD BE LIKE THAT OF SOCIETIES IN FOREIGN WORK.

IMMIGRATION INCREASES PROBLEM OF EVANGELISTS HERE.

CHURCH NOTES OF INTEREST.

A proposition is under consideration which looks toward an organization of the representatives of Home Mission Boards and Societies of America similar in its plan and purpose to the Conference of Foreign Mission Boards, which has been in existence for about fifteen years. Officials of home mission organizations have been brought together recently by several problems which require consideration by all such organizations, and the result of several conferences has been a feeling that a permanent organization, in which all such organizations might be officially represented, would not only serve as a medium for the discussion of problems common to all the denominational home mission agencies, but would tend to bring about a similarity of method which would certainly be advantageous to the work.

At one of the informal conferences already held in New York there was appointed a committee to formulate a plan for permanent organization. This committee is to report in a few days, and it is understood that it will recommend an organization similar to the Foreign Mission Conference, to which each board or society is entitled to send two delegates, and at the meetings of which all officers and members of foreign boards are entitled to be present. Home mission activity at the present time has been largely increased because of the great increase in immigration. Mission officials say that although the bulk of present immigration comes from Europe, which ranks as a Christian country, the need of definite evangelistic work among a large proportion of the aliens is very evident. A majority of them are but nominal Christians and effort must be made to get them into personal relations with American churches, or, it is alleged, they are likely to become a menace to American civilization. The last report of the Commissioner General of Immigration, showing the arrival in the last fiscal year of 1,285,349 aliens, is being commented upon in all missionary circles, and the present year will doubtless see a large increase in the number of missions established in the next twenty-five years.

Home mission officials, largely because of immigration, but also because of the tendency of the people of rural districts to gravitate toward the cities, are saying that they find the fields for their work to be centering in the large cities of the country. A few years ago home missions indicated the work on the frontier of the West, the South or the North; but increasingly home mission work is centering in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Pittsburgh, Chicago, St. Louis and the other great cities of the country. The change has brought a strain upon home mission finances, because, whereas land may be bought and a church building erected on the frontier for a few hundred dollars, to establish a mission plant in a large city requires an expenditure of at least $10,000 and sometimes twice that sum.

IN DEFENSE OF LAYMEN.

Morney Williams Replies to Criticism As to Their Missionary Activities.

The criticism recently directed against the Laymen's Missionary Movement because it is exclusively foreign missionary in its purpose and practically ignores the need for the spread of Christianity in America has drawn a reply from one of the leaders in the movement, Morney Williams, a prominent Baptist lawyer of New York. Mr. Williams has been in the movement since its organization and is supposed to express in his statement the opinions of the officials of the organization.

He points out the fact that the Laymen's Missionary Movement, when it was organized a year ago, was for purposes. The first was to devise a plan whereby the message of the Gospel might be sent to the entire non-Christian world during the next twenty-five years; and the second to suggest, through commissions of Christian business men, methods on the foreign mission fields which might result in the greater efficiency of the work. On the first point he says:

"Unfortunately as such a division may be, and sad as it is that any line should be drawn between men, all of whom are made of one blood and the image of God, the fact remains that there are so-called Christian lands which are generally grouped under the head of Christendom, and other lands which are utterly and absolutely non-Christian. In the lands nominally Christian it is, of course, true that the full message of Jesus Christ has not been proclaimed. It is nevertheless true that in the lands where there is no proclamation of Jesus Christ there is a different obligation, and a very urgent one, resting upon Christians, namely, the bringing of the knowledge of Jesus Christ to those who have had no opportunity of hearing Him."

It was for this, Mr. Williams said, that the Laymen's Missionary Movement was started. "To impress upon laymen generally their duty with regard to this one thing, the proclamation of Christ in non-Christian lands." He holds it to be necessary to confine a movement of this kind to men who have intensity and force enough to accomplish its object. Home and city missions and other forms of Christian philanthropy, Mr. Williams holds to be important forms of work, but work not definitely the task of the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

Regarding the second purpose of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, a purpose which has much to do with mission administration, Mr. Williams says: "A further reason why the Laymen's Missionary Movement, as an international movement, must remain foreign missionary, is the sad but uncontrollable fact that the various Protestant denominations can work together untidily on the foreign mission field, and have not as yet been able to work this in the home mission field. It is quite possible that the home mission boards might be glad of co-operation with the Laymen's Missionary Movement in the raising of money, but as the movement has not merely the object of raising money, but of suggesting, after inspection of the field, the wisest ways of expending money. Is it to be conceived that the various Protestant denominations are ready to welcome a movement which would go into home mission territory and undertake to criticize the overlapping of work between different Christian bodies in the same field?"

To Relieve Clergy Shortage.

To remedy if possible the desperate situation among Episcopalians over the supply of clergymen a campaign is being entered upon next week by the clergy in some measure responsible for inducing some proportion of the young men in their congregations to enter the ministry. An initial step in the scheme is to remove St. Stephen's College from a rural site on the shore of the Hudson river above Poughkeepsie to New York City, place it on the site by the side of the new Cathedral of St. John the Divine, and affiliate it with Columbia University.

St. Stephen's College dates from 1869 and grew out of a class of young men, under the ministry that studied under the late Bishop Seymour, of Springfield, Ill., then the rector of a small Hudson Valley parish. It is not a university, and its aim is chiefly to educate young men for the ministry, doing so at a minimum cost. There are ample grounds around the Episcopal Cathedral in New York, and it is stated that the new institution into its circle, without the absorption of its individuality or the curtailment of any of its functions.

The plan is, however, much larger than a small college venture. It contemplates action by diocesan conventions and by the General Convention of the Episcopal Church, and with St. Stephen's as the center it is planned to make a systematic and permanent campaign to call the attention of young men to the need that exists in the ranks of the Episcopal ministry. There are vastly more churches than ministers, and large numbers of places are left vacant because men cannot be found to fill them.

As to Ownership of Property. It is alleged that the legal contest between the minority of the old Cumberland Presbyterian Church which would not accept union with the Northern Presbyterian Church, and the reunited church is to have its culmination in a contest for the possession of the old Cumberland Presbyterian Publishing House at Nashville. This is purely denominational property and it is believed that the decision of the courts as to whether it belongs to the Presbyterian Church or to the body which calls itself the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, will be considered decisive.

although some decisions lie with the remnant of the Cumberland Church.

Pan-Anglican Congress Plans. Episcopal dioceses in this country are appointing secretaries to give information to Episcopal clergy and laity intending to go abroad this year about the Pan-Anglican Congress, which is to meet in London June 15 to 24. The opening service is to be held in Westminster Abbey, night meetings in Royal Albert Hall and the final service, when the offering is to be presented, in St. Paul's Cathedral. The sessions proper will be held in the Church House, Westminster. Six main topics are to be presented, each with several divisions. The six are the relation of the Anglican Church to human society and to missions, the sacred ministry, the present spiritual status and the Anglican communion itself, the last named involving the relation to other religious bodies, including Rome on one side and Protestantism on the other. The offering to be presented in St. Paul's on June 24 is to go to missions in distant fields and gives a very definite object. All schools of thought are joining in this congress in England, and this is also true of the various schools in the Episcopal Church in this country. Already a number of American bishops have signified their intention to attend. Each American diocese may, if it will, appoint six delegates.

New Conference Headquarters. A new summer conference headquarters is to be established this year at Montrose, Pa., in Susquehanna county, in the northeastern part of the State. The superintendent of the new conference is to be the Rev. R. A. Torrey, and it is to be conducted along the lines established by Mr. Moody at Northfield and later by Dr. Chapman at Winona, Ind. Dr. Torrey and Dr. Chapman were both associated with D. L. Moody in his evangelistic work, and in recent years both have headed evangelistic movements. Dr. Chapman as leader of the Presbyterian forces and Dr. Torrey leading an undenominational, independent movement at Montrose, which has high ground and attractive surroundings, Dr. Torrey to have the assistance of Dr. James M.

Gray, of the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, and Dr. A. C. Dixon, of the Moody church, in the same city.

PLEA FOR TENANT CLASS OF TOBACCO GROWERS.

(To the Editor of the Courier-Journal.) Without abating a single wrong done the tobacco farmers of Kentucky by the American Tobacco Company or by any other party, I am, nevertheless, pleading for the farmers of all classes, having been born and reared in the farm, and having invested in the trade of farming in early life, it has occurred to me that the practice of the tobacco landowner of Kentucky has not been as fair as it might have been, and to tell the plain truth, is not so fair as it should be. Why is it not palpable extortion to exact one-half of the crop raised in any and all years by the tenant, as rent for the land so cultivated? Frequently, too, the tobacco tenant is required in addition thereto to pay house and garden rent and pasturage for stock. He is always ready to stand up for right-doing, and the time and supreme efforts to the cultivation of the tobacco crop. If it be true that the American Tobacco Company is gobbling up one-half or more of the profits of tobacco raising, and the other half is gobbled by the landowner of the farm, it is due to the tenant, and of the highest consideration and effort at relief by all fair people.

Equity in the case of the country is unjustly denied the party in asking it until he is "bought clean," using an expressive slang phrase. If there is a people or class of people on earth that need encouragement and right living and thus safeguarding good government and the continuance of our best institutions, it is due to the poor, honest and hard-working people of our population wherever they are. It looks like greed, and graft is in its worst stages of operation according to the stages of wealth and not poverty. The middle class and under class of our population, all honor to them, seems to be the residual repository of all, or nearly all, virtue and patriotism in the country. Without further elaboration of that subject, I suggest that the landlords of Kentucky, and especially the tobacco landowners, get together and make their contracts with tenants in the interest of fairness and justice, and in correction of the injustice now practiced against tobacco tenants, as a part of the fulfillment of the aims and purposes of the Society of Equity.

If they will not do so voluntarily I suggest that the tenant tobacco growers of the State organize against the oppression and enforce it by refusal to grow tobacco in 1908, or any other year, until it is remedied. I will agree to act for the tenant association as legal counsel for and during the balance of my life, without fee or price or until the wrong is remedied.

THE CENT WINS OUT.

(Leslie's Weekly.)

Whether the currency stringency is responsible for it or not, it is certain that the long-existing prejudice of the West against the use of the cent is being broken down. In Oregon and Washington merchants are yielding to the demands of their patrons, many of them people of Eastern birth who have settled in the Northwest, to introduce the copper coin in business transactions. Formerly no coin smaller than the five-cent piece was in circulation, and in cases where purchases came to sums which were not multiples of five it was the custom to make transactions in "even money." The principal objection to the reform in this method is that it means additional work for accountants and an ever changing cash registers. Nevertheless, many of these, and a larger number of slot machines, have been changed so as to receive cents. Department stores use gum and weighing machines with penny slots in order to stimulate their use and give them a supply with which they do business.

OWNS 35,000 COLLIES.

(New York Press.)

"You talk of Pierpont Morgan's collies," said a Russian, "what do you think of a man who owns 35,000 sheep dogs?" "Impossible." "No, no. The man I refer to is Gustav Jovanovitch, the Russian millionaire. Jovanovitch's sheep whiten the Siberian plains for hundreds of square miles. They number 1,750,000, and 35,000 dogs look after them. You talk of your mammoth American business enterprises, but have you anything to compare with one employing 85,000 dogs?"

SHATTERED HEALTH THE PRICE ENGLISH STATESMEN PAY FOR PREMIERSHIP.

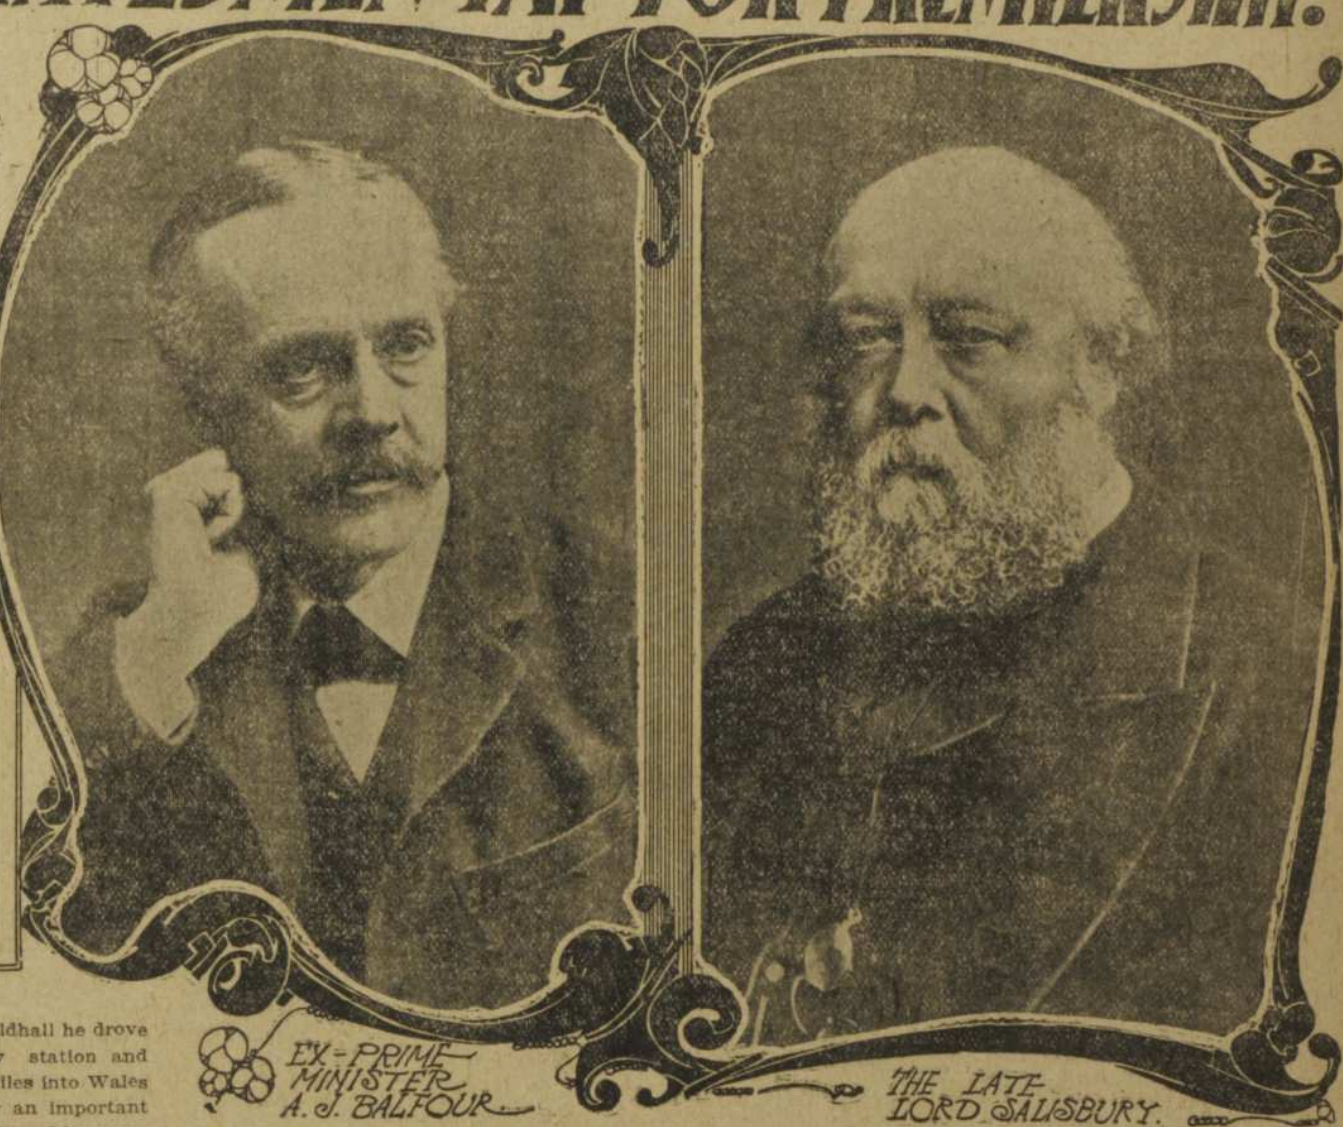

SIR HENRY CAMPBELL-BANNERMAN.

PRIME MINISTER CAMPBELL-BANNERMAN ADDRESSING THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

IN THE PEERS' GALLERY.

THE LATE LORD SALISBURY.

London, Jan. 2.—Broken health is the price almost invariably paid for the highest office under the crown in England—that of Prime Minister. Truly it may be described as a killing job. Attention has been called once again to the tremendous strain it places on the vitality of the incumbent by the recent breakdown of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, which was solely due to overwork.

There is probably no position, public or private, in the world which makes so many demands on the time and energy of its holder. Americans are accustomed to the statement that the President of the United States is the hardest worked man in the country, but he leads a life of luxurious ease compared with that of the Prime Minister of the British Empire. Try to imagine the duties of the President, the leader of the House of Representatives and the leadership of the National Cabinet rolled into one, and add to that personal responsibility for all the machinery of government, including every department looked after in America, by a member of the Cabinet who is also independent. Add to these duties the ever-present necessity of watching the political temper of Parliament, on which the Premier's tenure of office depends, and the drudgery of addressing numberless great meetings and traveling from one end of the kingdom to another when Parliament is not sitting.

and you may have some idea of the burden of toil that falls on the shoulders of the British Prime Minister.

The President of the United States is an executive officer only. Except as far as his personal influence goes he has nothing to do with the legislative branch of the Government. His secretaries in charge of the various departments are semi-independent, and except in matters of broad, general policy he has little concern with the direct management of the various departments of the Government.

Holds All Branches.

The Prime Minister of England is an executive, a legislative and a political officer. He must have a seat in one or the other House of Parliament, and he must be in his place night after night to lead his party and answer the questions of his opponents who do not err on the side of consideration for the much harassed man whom they are trying their hardest to oust from his high position. It must be remembered, too, that the House of Commons, in which the present Prime Minister sits, does not, like the House of Representatives, meet in the morning and adjourn at a reasonable hour. It meets in the afternoon, seldom adjourns before midnight and often sits all night. All this time the Premier has to be in his place, although he may have been hard at work on the administrative features of his routine since early morning. He may have to make a dozen speeches in a night, many of them impromptu, and he must always be alert and have all his wits about him, for an apparently slight slip may mean the downfall of his Government and the defeat of all the measures and policies for which it stands.

This is the legislative side of his work. On the administrative side he must preside, sometimes daily, for a week or more, and usually at least once a week at Cabinet Councils at which the party programme of legislation, the party policy on all great questions and many small ones, appointments to office and a host of other details are discussed. He must act as peacemaker among a group of ambitious men struggling to secure each for himself whatever credit is to be got for the Government's accomplishments and to place on some one else's shoulders the responsibility for failure. He must labor to keep his Cabinet harmonious, although there are often grave differences of policy and principle among its members, and to see that it presents a united front to the country.

In addition to all this he may be summoned at any moment to attend the King, and that is a summons that must not be disobeyed. He has to attend the King's Privy Councils and he must be in evidence when the King entertains foreign royalties or other guests of political importance, and perhaps these functions are the most tiring of all to a man who has passed middle age, as the British Premier almost invariably has. One must do a good deal of standing in the presence of royalty, and a good deal of bowing, and they are both physically tiring. The restraint and etiquette are mentally wearing, especially to a man who, like Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, has not been brought up in the atmosphere of the court. But it must also be remembered that England is an immensely democratic country, notwithstanding all the pomp and circumstances which surround its monarch and its government. The Prime Minister must be almost as accessible as the President of the United States. Day after day he must receive deputations from all sorts of public and commercial bodies interested in legislation or administrative policy and he literally dare not refuse to see them. It will be seen then that the twenty-four hours are all too short for the Prime Minister's work.

His Holidays Strenuous.

His holidays even are strenuous. When Parliament adjourns, the round of speech-making begins. The Prime Minister must make at least one great speech to his own constituents. He must attend banquet after banquet, and at each one he is expected to say something that is addressed not only to those within the sound of his voice, but to the whole country, and he must write letters and send messages to dozens of meetings that it is physically impossible for him to attend.

Perhaps this very inadequate recital of the principal of his duties will give some idea of the enormous strain to which the Prime Minister is subjected. On the day on which Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman was in attendance on the King and his guest, the German Emperor, to receive a deputation of brewers and others interested in the new liquor legislation which is promised for the next session of Parliament. From his official residence at 10 Downing street, where he received the deputation, he drove to Guildhall, in the old city of London, and was present at the City Corporation's lunch in honor of the Kaiser, and from the Guildhall he drove straight to the railway station and traveled more than 200 miles into Wales where he was to deliver an important political speech that night. Of course, he was the guest of honor at a great banquet immediately after his arrival and after the banquet he delivered his speech.

The break-down came in the night a short time after he had retired to bed, and the result is that he has now been compelled to abandon all business and take a long rest on the Riviera.

Sir Henry is only the last of a long line of Premiers who have sacrificed their health for the public service. His immediate predecessor, Mr. Balfour, was ill more than once during his term of office and immediately after his leaving it he was compelled to take a long rest. In spite of that, he has never been a well man since. Mr. Balfour, too, is a younger man than Sir Henry, who is seventy-one and he has the additional advantage of being a devotee of the outdoor life. Every minute that he can snatch from the hurly-burly of politics is devoted to golf and he is classed as one of the best amateur golfers in the kingdom.

His uncle, Lord Salisbury, who preceded him in the premiership, was a man of extraordinary constitution, but even he confessed that the only way in which he kept himself fit for his duties was by having a hobby. His hobby was chemistry and after a wearying night in Parliament he would devote a few hours in his laboratory to working out some problem which gave him mental relief at least from the cares of state. Even Lord Salisbury, however, did not last long after his retirement from public life, and his life was undoubtedly shortened many years by the enormous labors of the premiership.

Probably one of the most remarkable workers who ever held this great office was Mr. Gladstone. In appearance he was almost frail and it is well known that his health was never robust. It is also now common knowledge that he owed his power to continue working as he did, to the devoted care of his wife, who indeed combined the cares and duties of a wife, a nurse and a mother. There was never a late sitting at the House which did not find Mrs. Gladstone waiting in her carriage in the palace yard for her husband to join her, and her first care was to wrap a muffler around his throat and a shawl about his shoulders.

She watched his physical condition with the keenness of a physician and at the slightest sign of over-strain she insisted on carrying him off in the country, where he was wont to recuperate with the aid of his favorite exercise of cutting down trees.

Stood While At Work.

Another Prime Minister who suffered from the strain of the office was Lord Palmerston, whose prodigious energy was the subject of special remark by all his contemporary biographers. Prof. Payne, in a volume of reminiscences, tells of leaving the House with Palmerston at 1 o'clock one morning and walking up Parliament street with him. At the door of the Foreign Office Palmerston left him, remarking that he had several important dispatches to revise before he could go to bed. It is said that Palmerston made it a practice to work ten hours a day at the Foreign Office in addition to attending to his legislative duties. He had a desk constructed at the Foreign Office at which he used to stand, because he said, if he fell asleep the fall would wake him.

Another of his biographers tells of going to call on him one night. As the caller approached the house he saw Palmerston come out bareheaded and look cautiously around. Apparently satisfied that no one was in sight he proceeded to climb over the high railings in front of the house and then entered the house. In reply to his caller's inquiries he said that this was his way of ascertaining if he was keeping in proper physical condition or not. If overwork was telling on him too much he would be unable to climb the railings.

William Pitt, the first Earl of Chatham, presented perhaps the only case of a Premier who was actually killed by his work when in harness. He was suffering from a serious break-down when a Parliamentary crisis arose and against the advice and entreaties of his physicians, he insisted on going to the House. When there he was seized with the attack which terminated in his death. It is interesting to Americans to note that the business he was engaged in when he collapsed was the moving of an address to the King praying him to withdraw his troops from America and make peace with the revolted colonies.

The younger Pitt was also a victim of the burden of the premiership, and history records several instances of his break-down.

George Canning actually became ill in the House when he was Premier and was laid aside for months by a serious illness brought on by the cares and duties of his office. Peel said if his nose did not bleed every night in the House he would collapse.

It is hard to say what the remedy for this state of affairs is. In fact, there seems to be none under the English political system and the tendency is for the Premiership to become still harder with the growth of democracy. In the old days the Premier was spared the endless processions of deputations from labor unions, friendly societies, clubs of all kinds, and all sorts of business associations which the Premier of to-day has to receive. To refuse to see one of them might cost his party thousands of votes or even mean the loss of a seat in Parliament.

King Lightens Burden.

The attendance on royalty is a duty of state which cannot well be dispensed with, although the present King with his usual good sense has recognized the strain on the Premier and has cut it down to a minimum. The Parliamentary duties are regarded as indispensable, for the British people demand that the responsible head of their Government shall be present in Parliament to answer for all his actions to the representatives of the people, and his position as a member of Parliament as well as as the head of the Government, entails a certain amount of campaigning and public speaking.

The conclusion, impotent as it may seem, seems to be that England must continue to sacrifice her ablest men on the altar of the Premiership.

Emigration and the Problem It Has Brought To Italy.

By ANTONIO MANGANO.

A STORY is told of a trip made by the late Prime Minister Zanardelli through one of the Italian provinces where emigration had begun to be a menace to the community. The Mayor and chief men of one town met the minister at the station and escorted him in state to the central square, where, before a platform gorgeously decorated in red, white and green of Italy, waited a motley throng. Looking down on those poor, half-starved, ill-clad peasants, the Prime Minister listened to an elaborately prepared address of welcome read by the Mayor: "I welcome you in the name of the five thousand inhabitants of this town, three thousand of whom are in America and the other two thousand preparing to go," it ran.

Question Vital One.

An extreme instance, do you say? Yes, yet this is the phase of our immigration question which strikes home to Italy, and vital as the question of Italian migration is to us in the United States, it concerns Italy vastly more. I have spent several months traveling through Italy, riding through the country and seeking out the villages and hamlets where tourists rarely go. It is from these villages that emigration is largest, it is here that the effect of the enormous annual exodus of Italian workmen is most evident.

In their official reports the Italians group their emigrants in two classes, temporary and permanent. To the first class belong all those who leave the country annually during the working season—from May to October—and those who leave for a definite period of time and who, with few exceptions, return to Italy. In general the members of this temporary class go from the northern provinces—Piedmont, Lombardy, Venetia, Emilia, Tuscany. The north of Italy is a great plain containing the most fertile and productive land in the country.

Temporary Sojourners.

The northern peasants are taller, healthier and better fed and clothed than those of the southern provinces. The thousands who leave their home each year generally return when the working season is over and spend their earnings in their native land. They are still loyal Italian citizens and their money adds to the prosperity of this region.

In the early days emigration was mainly limited to the provinces of the north. From the south there were but few who emigrated prior to 1885, unless the Basilicata be excepted. While a goodly number from the southern provinces may be found in South America and in Africa, there being a flourishing colony of 75,000 Italians in Tunis, by far the vast majority find their way to the United States.

Two Classes Leave.

The Italian Government reports emigration is divided into two classes, those who cross the ocean and almost as a whole now come to the United States, and those who find their way to the countries of Europe and to countries bordering on the Mediterranean. During the year 1906, of the northern provinces, Piedmont furnished 72,199 emigrants, but only 33,885 crossed the ocean. Lombardy gave a total of 63, 632 in the same year, but only 20,646 came to America, and of the 104,885 emigrants from Venice, only the insignificant number of 16,000 crossed the ocean.

The southern districts tell a very different story. The Abruzzi and Molise give as the total number of emigrants, 58,032, only 6,039 of whom remained on the other side of the ocean; while Sicily shows 127,603 emigrants for the same year, 121,669 coming to our shores. The three provinces of Calabria during the same period sent forth 57,084 emigrants, and all but 1,567 crossed the Atlantic. But it is in the Basilicata which is today under greatest stress owing to the loss of nearly all its able-bodied men. From this province alone, in 1906, went 18,098 emigrants and all save 210 came to America.

The Permanent Exodus.

Of more importance to the American are those foreigners who land at our ports and remain here permanently in the proportion of two out of three. The provinces from which they come are the Abruzzi, east of Rome; Bari, east, but farther south; Avellino and Basilicata, in the central and southern part, and Calabria, comprising the three provinces of Cosenza, Catanzaro and Reggio, joining the extreme southern part of the peninsula and the island of Sicily. To this second, or permanent, class of immigrants belong those who absent themselves from their own country for a long period of time or settle permanently in foreign lands.

From Bugged Strongholds.

Nature has not been kind to man in these Southern provinces. The lofty range of the Apennines is picturesque and magnificent in its snow-capped grandeur, but the rocky sides are useless to the farmer and yield nothing, even as herbage for flocks. Most of the vineyards and orchards are on the hill-sides, and where the slope is very steep the peasants have built platforms of earth, twelve or fifteen feet wide, supported by thick stone walls, six or eight feet high. Flights of stone steps lead from one terrace to another. Here are fig trees, pomegranates and citron and entire hill-sides covered with the silvery gray foliage of the olive. Where there are no orchards or vineyards there are vegetables, and these are often planted between rows of vines or trees, so that every available inch of ground is used. The pitiful fact is, however, that even with so much hard work the soil produces only food enough to scantily feed the increasing number of inhabitants, and wages are only thirty cents a day for a man, and less for women and boys.

Americans Popular.

An American is a marked man in Southern Italy. Especially did I find this true in the out-of-the-way towns where tourists never go. The people quickly collect in a group and follow the stranger, eager to ask questions about America, which seems to them almost an enchanted country.

In the province of Bari, as I entered the town of Altamura, I saw a great throng of people. Upon inquiry I was told that they had been to the station to bid good-bye to 129 of their townsmen who had just left for America.

Three weeks later, in Gravina, 200 emigrants were accompanied to the station by nearly half the population of the town. These towns have only recently caught the migrating fever. In 1900 and 1901, Altamura sent us twenty-five and thirty-six and Gravina twenty-five and ninety-six, respectively.

In Naples I had been only a day at the hotel when the head waiter, a very capable man, who speaks fluently English, French and German, as well as Italian, introduced himself to me and asked if I thought he could find work in America.

The concierge, or head clerk, of this same hotel, a man speaking several languages, told me he was planning to go to America. A week later the little Calabrian elevator boy asked me if I would help him to get work in America.

All Think of America.

Everywhere I went I was met with requests for letters of introduction for prospective emigrants. There was talk of America constantly in the trains, on the road, in the towns. I invariably met people who had been to America or had friends or relatives here. Every train from the south which comes into Naples brings the familiar Italian emigrant. In the southern towns it is no uncommon thing to hear English spoken. In Sale, a town of the Abruzzi, there were about twenty-five men who had been to America and settled in Astoria, Long Island, and who expected to return in the spring. In Toritto I found young men, sons of emigrants, who could not speak Italian, but could speak excellent English. In a street car in Naples I watched with curiosity a conductor who had a book in his hands and, between collecting fares, seemed to be studying it. To my amazement I found that it was an Italian-English grammar and reading book. He was preparing himself to go to America.

In spite of the vast numbers that have left Italy during the last twenty years, four millions of whom have become a permanent element in foreign countries, the number of Victor Emmanuel's subjects has not diminished, but has on the contrary increased. Italy has an annual increase of births over deaths of 250,000, and in 1897 it rose to 406,000. This little peninsula with an area of 110,023 square miles has a population of 32,449,754, or 293 people to a square mile, as against France with 189 and the United States with only twenty-one.

Overpopulation in districts difficult of cultivation, heavy taxation, fearfully low wages and proportionately high rents, have combined to keep the people poor and living conditions little better than during the Middle Ages, and at last have compelled those who could not make even the poorest kind of a living at home to go elsewhere, usually to America. Emigrants, few in number at first, succeeded so well that others have followed, until now the Government, patriotic citizens and great land holders, are all deeply concerned about the departure of so many able-bodied workers.

Too Many People.

To put it another way, considering the small area of the country, together with the fact that one-third of this consists of barren mountains which produce absolutely nothing, and large sections are virtually abandoned, owing to the prevalence of malaria, it is quite evident that emigration must continue; otherwise, the country will not be able to support its inhabitants. Indeed, unless hundreds of thousands of Italians expatriate themselves every year, they will increasingly have to build their homes on the seashore and on the precipitous mountain sides. If the people who leave the country came in relatively equal numbers from all the provinces, and if the percentage of women were as large as the percentage of men, if the old and infirm would go as well as the young and strong, the Government would not complain.

The country can easily spare from 300,000 to 400,000, or the same number as the annual increase of births over deaths last year. But it cannot with impunity be drained of 400,000 of its agricultural population, the food-producing class, especially when over three-fourths of this number are men from seventeen to thirty-five or forty years of age, representing always the most vigorous and ambitious element in their home towns, and coming, as they do, from a limited section of the country.

Town Without Males.

In the course of a trip from La Cava to Sorrento, we passed through Positano, a quaint town perched on the hillside that has been abandoned by its male inhabitants, all of whom are in America. We saw row after row of empty, desolate-looking houses. The proprietor of the old Capuchin Monastery Hotel, at Amalfi, who has been on that beautiful spot for fifty years, told me how twenty years ago the place was a thriving town of 10,000. By 1901 it was reduced to 6,681, and to-day it cannot contain more than 3,000 persons. America has all the rest. This explains why the factories cannot run and why the vineyards are going to decay. In fact, so serious has this depopulation become that an effort has been made to colonize the Southern provinces with workmen from the North.

No Longer Balance Wheel.

When emigration had not assumed such enormous proportions as at the present time, the Italian Government looked upon it with favor. It but served as a kind of balance wheel to the economic equilibrium of the country. The laborers would leave home when they had no work and return at the end of the season with money to spend. This kind of emigration is fostered by the Italian Government, notwithstanding what may be said to the contrary. But the great bulk of the emigration to-day is a very different sort. It is the permanent tendency to the tide of emigration which is occupying the attention of those most keenly interested in the welfare of the country as a whole. They are seeing before their very eyes the depopulation of entire provinces, and the soil which once was a veritable garden, maintained in a high state of cultivation by the labor of countless contadini eager to work for the mere possibility of existence for themselves and their families, to-day lies abandoned because men cannot be found to till it.

PLACE FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

Our Own Corner

THIS department is being conducted for all kinds of contributions from children. Original poems, jingles, compositions, smart sayings of children, original drawings, puzzles, etc.—in fact, anything interesting that the readers of this page will send in—will be published.

Contributions from the children are asked, and should be addressed to "Our Own Corner," Children's Page, Courier-Journal.

New headings for this department are desired, and the best and most original one sent in will be used at the top of this department. Do not make them too large.

The drawing this week was made by Vinton Watts, of Louisville.

NOTICE.

The editor wishes to caution the contributors to this department not to send any but original work, either in compositions, puzzles, drawings, poems or anything else.

Remember that you have no right to sign your name to anything that is not original, so be very careful in this matter.

Be sure to mark your contributions each time with the word "original."

In sending in contributions to the Children's Page, always write on one side of the paper only, and sign your name and address legibly at the bottom of the contribution.

Her Western Trip.

Written By a Little Girl.

CHAPTER I.

AMMA, you don't know how I dread the trip," said Jessica Mason. "Just to think I may never see the girls and boys again, for if we go away out to Arizona, or Mexico, either, we are not likely to ever come back to Kentucky."

"You are looking on the dark side of things, daughter," said Mrs. Mason. "If you thought papa could make more money out West would not you be satisfied to sacrifice yourself a little for his sake? You know papa would not do it if he possibly could help himself, for he loves you dearly and would not ask you to go if he could avoid it."

Young Bluegrass Beauty.

SUSIE ELIZABETH FRANCES

Bright seven-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Lyons, of Campbellsville.

gilia looked around, but saw no one and started to run, for she was frightened.

Then the voice said: "I was once a Prince whom a witch changed into a tree. Break one of my branches every time you want a new dress."

The Princess at once broke a twig and instead of the dress she had been wearing she had on a beautiful said dress which was trimmed with golden stars. After that she lived happily for a long while, having a beautiful new dress every day.

One day after her dress had been changed the tree said: "Princess Virginia, will you help me? All you have to do is to chop me down."

"Willingly," said the Princess, "but I have not an ax."

"Thank you," said the tree, "just break one of my branches."

The Princess did as she was told and began to chop.

No one but a ax. The tree did not finish the sentence, for Virginia had already chopped down the tree and there stood a youth. The Princess had freed the Prince.

Prize Winners.

The correct answer to the puzzle published two weeks ago and guessed correctly by nearly 100 readers of the Children's Page is "CONFOUND IT." Many of the answers sent in were very carefully written and were not considered for that reason.

The first prize of $1 for the most successful answer is awarded to Marie Senning, of 120 East Broadway, Louisville.

The second prize, a book, goes to Pay E. D. Helburn, 511 West Chestnut street, Louisville.

The third prize, also a book, is given to Gliman Womack, of Winchester.

Notice—Prize winners living in Louisville will please call at the Courier-Journal editorial room on Tuesday afternoon between the hours of 2 and 5, else the prizes will be forfeited.

WITH MISS BARCLAY IN NEW YORK.

How the Young Tourist Is Met By Her Aunt and Given First Glimpse of the Great City.

Evelyn Claiborne Barclay left Thursday for New York. It was the first time she had ever gone so far East, and of course she was wildly excited at passing through so many big cities.

A glimpse of the great white shaft which marks Washington's grave made her long to stop in the Capitol City, but the train sped on after a few minutes' rest, and she saw the beautiful country, so full of early historical interest, which lies between Washington and Philadelphia by. All the time she was thinking of her history lessons and William Penn's city of brotherly love came in sight just as the story of the Charter Oak was vivid in her memory.

It was dusk when the train started on its last burst of speed to New York, and when Evelyn's aunt met her in Jersey City the lights of New York merely blazed at the city's vastness, thing to a man in a uniform and a hat, she was dazed when she saw the passengers swarming from the boat.

"Hurry," her aunt said, and swept her by the porters and crowds of waiting people.

Evelyn heard her aunt say something to a man in a uniform and a hat, she was dazed when she saw the passengers swarming from the boat.

and driven away. What a relief to be out of that bustle in a quiet carriage.

"Oh! Annie," she said, and it was almost the first time she had spoken, "I am so happy."

"My dear," her aunt said—and then quickly—"this is Twenty-third street, the great shopping street."

"Twenty-third?"

"Yes, you will see on the corner, a few blocks ahead, the famous Flatiron building. You have seen it in pictures."

"Of course Evelyn had on post cards. We all have."

"The crowds congregated so about that corner," her aunt went on, "that the police had a terrible time keeping it so that the cars and carriages could go by. You know Broadway is the busiest street in New York, and to keep the loafers off it the coppers would say: 'Twenty-three for you,' and send them down this way. You've heard that before?"

"We will be there in a few minutes. Fifth avenue crosses Broadway here."

"Run the same way?"

"Of course they do—well, that is— you see New York is laid out at right angles—streets, east and west, and avenues north and south. Broadway is a nondescript, that rambles, and here it crosses Fifth avenue at a sharp angle. There was, of course, a little triangle of land left and as it was in such a splendid location the owner built a great tall office building just the shape of the plot. There it is."

And she pointed through the window, where the slender steel network, full of light, rose from a foundation just the shape of a flatiron.

"Now we are turning into Broadway."

Evelyn looked from the window amazed.

She had never seen so many lights. She had never seen so many people. Everything was so bright; everything was in such a hurry. Automobiles whizzed by, hansom cabs took in or stopped to deposit laughing people. Every store looked as though it were more brightly lighted than any other store.

The theaters, which all seemed to grow in a bunch, looked like fairy houses, with the rows and rows of lights and their fantastic entrances.

On, on they went. Block after block of lights and life, until they turned into a great black wood, where lights glimmered at intervals through the trees.

"This," said her aunt, "is Central Park."

"Central Park! Really Central Park?"

She could not see much, it was so dark.

"But to-morrow," said her aunt, "and then she told her what she would see. Evelyn wrote it all down, to her mother. Her letter describing her stay in New York will be published next Sunday."

They left the park at Seventy-second street and crossed Fifth avenue. Mrs. Barclay told Evelyn that it was the street of palaces, not of homes.

"To-morrow you can see," she said, "then they drove east several blocks, and the carriage stopped before a large apartment house."

"We live here, dear," Evelyn's aunt said, and after paying the cabman she was followed by her niece into the house. Going up in the elevator she said:

"There is much for you to see before you sail Wednesday. I hope all your friends will write you letters to the steamer."

Evelyn hoped so, too. Won't you? A prize of a book will be given for the best letter. They must be sent by next Thursday afternoon.

THE GOOSE IS ALL RIGHT.

"You must no longer use the expression, 'As silly as a goose.' The naturalists of half a dozen countries have been studying the goose of late years, and they have come to the conclusion that she is the wisest fowl among them all. She never quarrels without cause; she sees danger before any other fowl; she has more courage than the rooster; she is far braver than the gobbler, and if given a fair show she can beat-off the fox."

A flock of geese squatted around the barnyard at night is a much greater protection than the watch dog. They are light sleepers, and will give the alarm the instant they see a stranger moving about. We should say "as wise as a goose," and give her all due credit."

It has been estimated that about one boy out of fifteen is left-handed when he reaches the age of ten. This is his mother's fault in not making him use his right hand more during his babyhood. In Germany there are schools where the boys are taught to be right-handed. Nearly all tools are made for right-handed men, and the boy who grows up left-handed will be awkward.

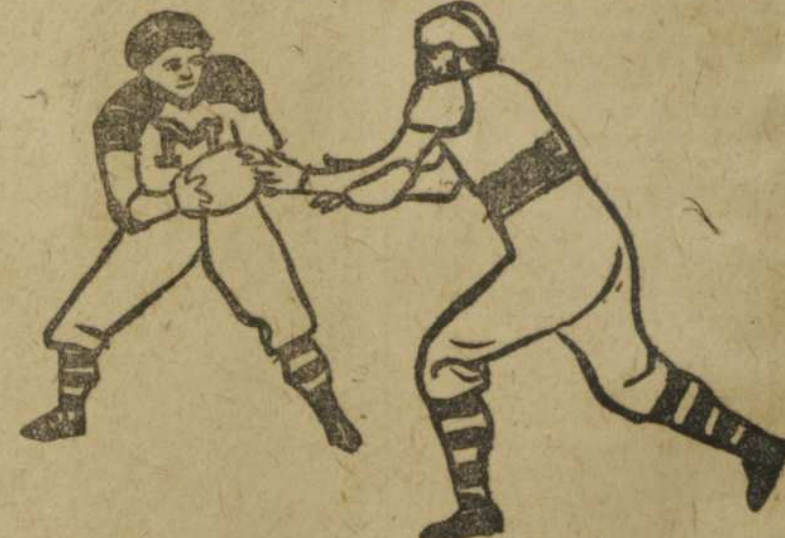

If one can use both hands alike he has an advantage in some things; but it seems as if nature intended the right arm to do most of the work.

THE GIRL WHO LOOKED.

An Idaho girl, eight years old, wanted a Teddy bear, and her mother told her she might go out into the fields and look for one. Not finding one near the house, the girl wandered farther away and presently found herself lost. For three days and nights searching parties were looking for her in the thickets, and she was finally found at the foot of a tree and fast asleep. When aroused she sat up and said:

"I've looked all over the world, and I can't find a Teddy bear. I guess they are all dead."

CHAPTER VI.

BURT DYKE had been so interested in watching the camp of the abductors that he had eaten nothing at noon time. Soon after 5 o'clock he made his way back to his boat, and while he lunched on the food he had brought he was busy thinking. Three or four plans came to his mind, but he finally decided on a very bold one.

As soon as the sun went down and it began to grow dark in the wood, he started back for the camp. He knew its location now and could have found it at midnight.

The shelter put up for Mr. Hinman was so small that it was probably occupied by him alone, while the three other men rolled themselves in their blankets outside. There would only be one on watch, and he would not be sitting within ten feet of the shelter.

It was very dark, but at the back the bushes even touched it. What Burt planned was to creep up to the back and try to obtain speech with the captive and be guided by what he said.

When he had made his way back he found the whole party eating supper at the campfire. He made his way to the back of the shelter and waited.

They left the park at Seventy-second street and crossed Fifth avenue. Mrs. Barclay told Evelyn that it was the street of palaces, not of homes.

"To-morrow you can see," she said, "then they drove east several blocks, and the carriage stopped before a large apartment house."

THE NEW ARABIA

How the English Are Gobbling the Peninsula and Planning Its Railroad Development

BY FRANK G. CARPENTER.
ADEN, Arabia, Dec. 27.—Have you ever heard what someone said to the Englishman who boasted that the sun never set on John Bull's possessions? It was "that the sun did not dare to set for fear the old pirate might steal something more."
 As it is now, the English own countries in nearly every part of the globe. They have more land in North America than we have. They have recently added to their African colonies, so that they now own more than one-third of that continent, and they are slowly and surely gathering in everything else that lies loose. One of their latest acquisitions is Arabia. They now practically control the whole of it. They have the Sinal peninsula, through their possession of Egypt, and they can control that part of Arabia along the Red sea through the ports which they are building on the opposite coast. They have entered into the closest of relations with the Sultan of Oman, and they have two uncrowned kings in the persons of certain of their political residents and Consuls General, who control the whole of Eastern and Southern Arabia. The first of these is stationed at Bushire, in Persia, but he has made treaties with the various tribes along the Arabian side of the Persian gulf, which give the English the trade of that region; and the same is true as to the tribes of Southern Arabia, they are controlled by the British resident here at Aden. These two Consuls General have established post-offices and postal routes through their respective spheres of influence, and they control not only the mails, but money matters as well. They are working in connection with India, and the money used are rupees and annas. If difficulties arise between the Arabs and Persians, they are brought to the English resident at Bushire, and if between the tribes of Southern Arabia, they are brought to Aden for adjustment.

Arabia To Have Railroads.

At the same time, the English are considering the development of the peninsula. They have proposed to build a pilgrimage railway from Jeddah, on the Red Sea, opposite Port Sudan, to take the great army of Mohammedan worshippers inland to Mecca. This would connect with their new railroad, which now crosses the Nubian desert from Suakin to the cape to Cairo route, and would open up an immense passenger traffic from Central Africa and upper Egypt during the pilgrimage season. If the English are not granted the concession for that road it will probably be built by the Mohammedans themselves, and in any event it will be more or less under British control and be a feeder for the Egyptian railway system.

Another railroad project is to run a line from Aden into Yemen. The latter province is one of the richest of Arabia. It has a good rainfall and is noted for its coffee and grain and fruits of various kinds. The idea is to run the line from Aden almost directly northward to Sana, one of the chief cities of Yemen, and an important commercial center. The road will make that town the capital of Western and Southern Arabia.

A third and still more ambitious project is to build a railroad across the northern part of the peninsula, making thereby a short cut to India and Persia and to the rich valley of the Euphrates, at the head of the Persian gulf. The present plan is to start the road at Port Said and go eastward across the peninsula to Busra, on the Euphrates. The most of the way will be right through the desert, and the distance altogether about 1,000 miles. I understand that the route is a feasible one, and the probability is that the efforts the Germans are now making to reach the Persian gulf may cause the British to wake up and adopt it.

The Peninsula.

As to Arabia itself, I doubt whether it will ever furnish a large traffic for railroads. There are certain provinces, such as Yemen, Oman and the valley of Mesopotamia, which are fairly well populated, but the whole peninsula has altogether not more than five millions, and these are scattered over a territory one-third as large as the whole United States. There are not a score of towns of any size in all Arabia, and you can count the cities on your fingers. The most of the country is like that about Aden, consisting of bleak, bare and rocky desert, with only a collection of black tents or thatched huts to break the monotony, and with trackless sands reaching off into the distance. And still Arabia has a coast line 1,000 miles longer than the distance between New York and San Francisco. It measures about 1,500 miles from north to south and 1,200 miles from east to west. Almost the whole of the United States east of the Mississippi could be crowded within its borders, and a considerable part of it is still unexplored by white men. It is a mountainous country. It has peaks twice as high as Mt. Washington, and the table land of Nijd is on the average more than a half mile above the sea. South of Mecca there are mountains over 8,000 feet high, and the hills here at Aden are about as high as the average elevation of the Blue Ridge in Virginia.

Yemen, northeast of Aden, running along the Red sea, has a fairly good rainfall and climate. The same is true of Oman and Muskat. The valley of Mesopotamia is watered by the Euphrates, and is as fertile as Egypt; but the greater part of the peninsula is as barren as the Sahara.

The Land of Mocha Coffee.

The very best of our Mocha coffee is shipped from Aden to the United States. It comes here on camels from the province of Yemen. It is raised there by the natives, each family having a few bushes about its house, and producing only enough for home use and a little for trading. There are no big plantations and no coffee factories. The berries are gathered when ripe and dried in the sun. After this they are put up in bales, and carried on camelback over the hills to this place. They are hauled between millstones turned by hand, and are then winnowed and sorted for shipment. The latter work is done by the women, who look over each grain carefully and take out the bad ones. Labor is cheap, but the coffee has to go through many hands. It pays toll to the chiefs of the tribes who own the country through which it is carried, and as a result it must be sold at high prices. For this reason we have imitations of Mocha coffee from all parts of the world. During my stay on the plantations of Brazil I have seen them label bags as Mocha, and Guatemala and other coffees are sold under the same name. Just now they are bringing coffee from Ceylon and Java to Aden and transshipping them here. They lie in the warehouses for a few weeks, and then go forth remarked and perhaps rebagged, as Arabian Mocha.

The English At Aden.

This port of Aden has belonged to John Bull for something like sixty-eight years. He took possession of it in 1839 and later on gobbled up the Island of Perim, in the Strait of Bab-el-Mandeb. That island is about 100 miles from here, and the two places practically control the entrance to the Red Sea and the Suez Canal. As for Aden, it is the Gibraltar of this part of the world, as well as one of the greatest of the British coaling stations. Something like 3,000 steamers and native craft call at it every year. The harbor is excellent and the outer entrance is more than three miles wide. The inner waters have been so dredged that steamers of twenty-six feet can go everywhere, and there is room enough for all the vessels that pass through the canal to anchor here at one time.

Aden is strongly fortified. The town stands on a volcanic isthmus, and it is guarded by a broad ditch, which has been cut out of the solid rock. It has a garrison of 3,000 or 4,000 men, guns of the latest pattern, and no one knows how many submarine and submarine mines.

A Desert City.

I wish I could show you the town as it lies before me. It is the sorriest city I have ever seen. There is nothing to compare with it, except Iquiqui, on the nitrate coast of South America, and Iquiqui is a Paradise to it. Imagine a great harbor of sea-green water, the shores of which rise, almost abruptly into ragged mountains of brown rock and white sand. There is not a blade of grass to be seen, there are no trees, and even the cactus and sage brush of our American desert are absent. The town is without vegetation. It is as bare as the bones of the dead camels in the desert behind it, and its tropical sun beats down out of a cloudless African sky. Everything is gray and dazzling white. The houses on the sides of the hills are white, the rocks throw back the rays of the sun, and the huts upon their sides are of the same gray color as themselves.

The city looks thirsty and dry. It is dry. There is only a well or so in the place, and these, I am told, the English bought of their owners for something like $1,000,000. Almost all of the water used is condensed from the sea, and fresh water always brings its price. There are no streams anywhere within miles. The town is situated in a crater of an extinct volcano, and there is one great depression nearby in which some famous stone tanks were made a thousand or so years ago. These tanks are so big that if they were cleaned out they might hold 30,000,000 gallons of water. As it is, they have now a capacity of only 8,000,000 gallons. The water is caught when it rains, and is sometimes siphoned out to the highest bidder. The receipts go to the English government, and a good rain may bring in fifteen or twenty thousand dollars or more.

The People.

This is my second visit to Aden. My first was sixteen years ago, when I stopped here on my way around the world. I do not see that the town has changed and I doubt whether it has any more people than it had then. The population is about 40,000, and it is made up of all the nations and tribes common to the Indian ocean. It contains Arabs, Africans, Jews, Portuguese and East Indians. There are about 4,000 Europeans, and in this number are the merchants, officials and soldiers. The majority of the people are Arabs and the prevailing color is black. There are tall, lean, skinny black Bedouins from interior Arabia, who believe in Mahomet, and go through their prayers five times a day. There are black Mohammedans from Somaliland and black Christians from Abyssinia. In addition there are Parsees, Hindoos and Indian Mohammedans of various shades of yellow and brown. A few of the Africans are woolly-headed, but more of them have wavy hair, and the hair of the women hang down in cork-screw curls on both sides of their faces. Of these people neither sex wears much clothing. The men have a rag around the waist, and the women wear only skirts which reach to the feet.

The East Indians are everywhere. They do the most of the retail business and trading, and they are found peddling on every street corner. They dress according to their caste and religion. The Parsees, who are fire worshippers, wear black preacher-like coats and tall hats of the style of an inverted coal scuttle. The Indian Mohammedans wear turbans and the Hindoos wrap themselves up in great sheets of white cotton. In addition there are many Greeks and Italians, and not a few Persians. The English dress in white and wear big helmets to keep off the sun.

Camels and Caravans.

This is the land of the camel. Caravans are coming in and going out of the city every day. They bring bags of Mocha coffee and gums and take out European goods and other supplies to the various oases. There is a considerable trade with Yemen and also with the tribes of southeastern Arabia. There are always camels lying in the market place, and one sees them blubbing and crying as they are loaded and unloaded. They are the most discontented beasts upon earth, and are as mean as they look. One bit at me this afternoon as I passed it, and I am told that they never become reconciled to their masters. Nevertheless, they are the freight animals of this part of the world and the desert could not get along without them. They furnish the greater part of the milk for the various Arab settlements, the people make their tents of camel's hair, and they are, in fact, the cows of the desert. They are of many different breeds, and they vary as much in character as horses. There are some breeds that correspond to the percheron, and the best among them can carry half a ton at a load. There are others fitted only for riding and passenger travel. The ordinary freight camel makes only about three miles an hour, and eighteen miles is a good day's work. The best racing camels will travel twenty hours at a stretch, and will cover 100 miles in a day. Seventy-five miles in ten hours is not an uncommon journey for an Arabian racer, and much better speed has been made. As to prices, an ordinary freight camel brings about $30, but a good riding camel costs $100 and upward.

How God Made the Camel.

Have you ever heard how the camel was created? Here is its origin, as told by the Arabs. They say that God first formed the horse by taking up a handful of the swift south wind and blowing upon it. The horse, however, was not satisfied with his making. He complained to God that his neck was too short for easy grazing, and that his hoofs were so hard that he sank in the sand. Moreover, he said there was no hump on his back to steady the saddle. Thereupon, to satisfy the horse, God created the camel, making him according to the equine's suggestions. And when the horse saw his ideal in flesh and blood he was frightened to death at its ugliness and galloped away. Since then there is no horse that is not scared when it first sees a camel.

This story makes me think of the Arab tradition as to how God made the water buffalo, which, as you know, is about the ugliest beast that ever wore horns, hair and skin. God's first creation was the beautiful cow. When he had finished it the devil happened that way, and as he saw it he sneered out that he could make a better beast with his eyes shut. Thereupon the Lord gave him some material such as He had put into the cow and told him to go to work. The devil wrought all day and all night, and the result was the water buffalo.

The Arabian Horse.

I have made inquiries here and elsewhere as to the Arabian horse. He is a comparatively scarce animal, and he does not run wild in the desert, as some people suppose. Indeed, comparatively few of the Arabian tribes have horses, and the best are kept on the plateau of Najd, in the center of the peninsula. They belong to the Anazah tribe, which is one of the oldest of all, and which claims to date back to the flood. It is a wealthy tribe, and it has been breeding horses for many generations. The best stock has pedigrees going back to the time of Mahomet, and the very choicest come from five mares which were owned by the prophet and blessed by him. These horses seldom go out of Arabia. They are owned by the chiefs, and are not sold, except in times of the direst necessity. Now and then a few get into Egypt and other parts of North Africa, and the Sultan of Turkey is able to buy some for his stables.

During my stay in Algeria I saw 150 stallions in the great army stables at Blidah. Perhaps one-third of them were Arabian, and they were kept to breed horses for the French army. The Khedive of Egypt has some Arabian thoroughbreds, and there are a few in Morocco and Abyssinia.

It is only occasionally that a purebred Arabian goes to Europe or the United States. Two of the best stallions we ever imported were those which Gen. Grant brought from Constantinople. This was, I think, during his tour around the world. While visiting Turkey he and the Sultan visited the royal stables together. As they looked over the horses the Sultan told Grant to pick out the one he liked best, and he designated a dapple gray, called "The Leopard." "It is yours," said the Sultan, "and this also," pointing to a four-year-old colt called Linden Tree. In due time these two horses arrived in the United States and were put on Gen. Ed Beale's farm near Washington. They were used for breeding, and they produced altogether about fifty fine colts.

A $3,000 VISIT TO LUTHER BURBANK

AN INTERESTING account of a "$3,000 visit" to Luther Burbank, California's plant wizard, is given in the Honolulu Bulletin by Gerrit P. Wilder, a traveler who recently returned to his home in Hawaii.

"I had a most satisfactory, though short, visit to Mr. Burbank at his home at Santa Rosa," said he. "It is practically impossible for people to see him nowadays, as he feels that there is such an amount of work which he wants to accomplish that his moments are precious. He has a secretary and a score of stenographers, for he is occupied now in getting out a work in twenty-two volumes. He himself told me that he valued his time now at $1,500 an hour, and as we talked steadily and walked about his gardens for two hours I made a $3,000 call upon him, so to speak."

"I do not know exactly how I expected Mr. Burbank to look. I was not prepared, however, to find him, in appearance, so much a student and thinker and so little like a man who had worked much out of doors. He is of medium height, thin, smooth faced, white hair and has been but kindly blue eyes. He came briskly into the room where I was waiting for him and greeted me in a very friendly and cordial way. I had been corresponding with him for several years. I also had at this time a letter of introduction from Mr. David Fairchild, of Washington; so that I had no trouble in getting my appointment."

"He wasted no time in preliminaries, but sat down directly in front of me, and said, 'Well now, Mr. Wilder, what do you want?'"

"The mines resemble coal mines, only, of course, they are a good deal paler. In their making, pits are first dug, and, as soon as a vein of meerschaum is struck, horizontal galleries are laid out. These galleries are often very long. They vary in depth from twenty-five to one hundred and fifty feet."

"The crude meerschaum is called ham-tash. It is yellowish white in color, and a red clay coal, of skin, envelops it. The blocks, as they come forth, are sold on the spot. They cost from $25 to $300 a carload, according to their quality. They are soft enough to cut with a knife."

These blocks, before their exportation, must be dried. In the summer is it that you would particularly like to know?"

"I was quite prepared for this question, for I had made up my mind not to talk about all sorts of things, but to confine myself to a few questions as to the manner in which one might develop desired qualities in certain tropical fruits, more especially the papaya and avocado. He answered me fully and gave me much valuable advice. He said that he hoped that I would have infinite patience and not be discouraged by many failures, for if one he worked faithfully and intelligently along the right lines, success was sure to come."

"To illustrate this, he told me of how he had worked for many years to develop the California prune, so as to get along the right lines, success was sure to come."

"He said that he had a number of collectors who travel all over the world and send him rare plants. For many years he has been glad to turn over to me some of those which he thought I might successfully cultivate in Honolulu."

"The things which interested me most in his garden were his spineless cacti. He has so far improved this plant of the desert that he has produced them free of spines and with no fiber and the fruit, which is about the size and shape of a goose egg, is a bright pink with a thin skin, and the pulp is crisp, sweet, juicy and delicious."

"The day that I visited Mr. Burbank he had sold to a rancher of Australia one of his cacti for the round sum of $20,000. I must say that my short visit with Mr. Burbank was inspiring."

CHARLES OGDEN.

There are many Kings, but no Queens; few Earls, but more Princes and Dukes.

Not only are there Fish, but also Crabs, Cod, Bass, Pike and Whitefish; as well as thirty-eight Bacons and only one Quarrail.

No novelist nowadays need take such trouble as Dickens did to find names for his characters. The London post-office directory offers him an embarrassment of riches from which to pick and choose.

There are four Acres and ninety-seven Fields in London, which has also forty-eight Farmers, thirteen Plowmen, and three Cows. There are fifty-eight Frogs and five Porks.

Two columns shelter the Foxes. There are some twelve Jays, twenty-three Gays, and only one Tear; fifteen Friends are all that can be found in London, and eleven Fabians. There are three columns of Cooks and one of Carpenters, and pessimists will note there is at least one Man. Animal names are also to be found, viz.: Sixty-five Bulls, two Bunbys, two Rabbits and seventeen Capons. There is only one Puff and there are seven Leans.

Seven Pears, one Plum, three Grapes, three Oranges, twelve Peaches and sixteen Lemons are also; and for trees there are thirty-five Ash, forty-six Birch, eight Box and one Oak. Two Olives, sixteen Vines, and one Primrose

Etiquette For the Card Table.

FADS may come and fads may go, but the card party remains a sure and favorite means of entertaining friends informally, or of meeting more serious social obligations. The newcomer in a small town, conservative little city or suburban circle is oftentimes judged by her card-party manners, hence it is just as well for every woman—and her good man—to brush these up.

If a neighbor telephones or sends a note, asking you to come over the same evening, or the next, and make up a table at whist, or pinochle, or euchre, or hearts, this does not constitute formal entertaining, yet you should decide promptly, and, having accepted the invitation, keep your engagement. It is only courteous, also, to your host and hostess to dress prettily. This does not mean an evening frock, and neither does it mean that you can run over in your short-sleeved or rainy day skirt with a flannel shirt waist and linen collar. It means a pretty house dress, a cashmere or silk, with skirt and waist matching.

Your hostess will probably offer some light refreshment, and if she is up-to-date, will prepare this in a chafin-dish, around which you all gather. If the evening wanes and no refreshments are offered, you need not think that your hosts are inhospitable, nor does this bar you from offering some light refreshment when they return the call. I think that on the whole it is rather better, especially on cold winter nights, to offer refreshments, however small the number of players may be.

For the formal card party invitations are sent out anywhere from a week to two weeks in advance, so that the hostess may be sure of filling her tables with desirable guests. Regrets or acceptances should be sent promptly, and if an emergency arises after the invitation has been accepted, the hostess should be notified at once, so that she may invite a substitute or arrange for one less table.

If it is an afternoon party for women alone, then you wear your prettiest calling or reception gown, furs, hat, white gloves, etc. If it is evening and the party is large, you wear a frock cut with a Dutch or small square or "V" neck at least. Gloves are worn to the house either afternoon or evening, but removed for playing. In many of the large cities women retain their hats.

Hairdressers Busy.

Fashionable hairdressers are having the busy time of their lives this winter, says the New York Press. Not for a long time have heads been so much dressed for parties and balls. Not in years has so much false hair been worn, and the work of matching artificial and natural tresses together begins early and ends late. Plain bands of gold, one above the other and poised in the front of the hair, among the waved tresses, have been in evidence at the opera. The patrons of the Metropolitan say that few jewels are seen this season, and that women who sit in the parterre tier do not glitter as they have in other years. Diamond tiaras are not so numerous as usual. There is a fancy for plainer ornaments. Mayhap the fancy will change when Wall street stirs again.

Mid-Winter Raiments For Babies

THE gowning of the last-born is often a problem with the busy mother. When the first baby or two arrived on the scene making the tiny coats, frocks, sacques and petticoats was a pleasure. But as these babies grow into big boys and girls and other wee figures came to fill their places in cradle and high chair the making of many small garments is apt to degenerate into a burden almost grievous.

Yet every mother should try to find pleasure in this sort of sewing, for never again in the children's lives will the results of her handiwork give her such pleasure. A daintily dressed baby from twelve months to three years, is a bright spot in any home circle. If the mother is burdened by many household tasks or social duties, then she should press the elder daughters into this service and teach them that dainty sewing can be turned to other uses than the making of handkerchiefs, blouses and embroidered lingerie for themselves.

Until a baby learns to creep or toddle about into all sorts of mischief damaging to frocks, white is the one hue to be chosen for all garments, indoor or outdoor. And, in fact, white is the most economical hue, because it will wash and dry-clean as no delicate tint ever will. But the word "white" should not mean that babies do not need warm raiment just like their elders, in winter. Of course, in steam-heated homes or houses kept almost at blood heat by furnaces or stoves, the wash fabrics can be used exclusively. The up-to-date mother, however, does not keep her home so hot, and therefore it is often better to have wool slips to wear under the white wash frocks.

For this purpose, the less expensive outing flannel or wash flannel is the very best fabric. Do not select too tightly woven a piece, but allow for some "fulling" in the laundry. I have seen just the right weight in outing flannel for these little under-slips at seven and eight cents a yard, in white, cream, pale blue and pink. Both the white and pink launder admirably. Blue is apt to fade or "yellow," especially if allowed to freeze. These little slips should be made very plainly, with the plain coat sleeve, a semi-fitted waist or plain yoke and untrimmings. The latter should be a trifle shorter than the outside wash garment.

And talking of these little under-slips reminds me of something very pretty that I saw in a shop devoted exclusively to infants' wear. In a complete baby outfit there were half a dozen of these little flannel under-slips, with over-dresses to match. That is, the little dresses were made of white lawn with a band of flowered lawn just above the hem, at the cuffs and around the neck, in a tint to match the under-slip. If the under-slip was pink, the overdress was of white lawn, and the band-trimming showed pink roses, the tiny moss roses of your grandmother's time and mine. If the under-slip was blue, very delicate ragged robins appeared in the colored bands. The band above the hem was about three inches wide and the wrist and neck bands were an inch or less.

The little kimono sleeve is much seen this winter on frocks for toddlers, and on their little sacques for house wear, but all heavy coat sleeves for outdoor wear are either bishop-shaped or of the simpler mannish coat sleeve lines. All well-dressed children of tender years give the appearance of simplicity, but in reality there has never been a time when such exquisite care was taken in selecting fabrics and setting hand stitches. Handkerchief linen, batiste, finest of lawns and nainsook, these enter into all the tiny frocks for best or afternoon wear, and when lace is used it is the finest of French or German Val or real Torchon, than which no lace wears better. Hand embroidery, either in satin stitch, convent or eyelet patterns, is used to the exclusion of the machine-made insertings.

For the wee toddler there is nothing prettier than the plain straight skirt, hung from a yoke, and on this yoke should appear the only trimming employed. Two pretty yoke shapes are shown to-day, one in a point and another in three scallops, back and front. Either could be decorated with eyelet work or convent embroidery. When the latter is used, have alternate strips of hand-run tucks and tiny French vine patterns, or you can combine French Val insertion, very narrow, with strips of hand embroidery. For the scalloped, the all-over English eyelet pattern, not too large or heavy, are best. Even the hems of these dainty little frocks must be done by hand, and if any ruffling is used around neck and wrists, it must be no more than half an inch in width. MARY DEAN.

NIGHTINGALE OF FRENCH FLANNEL.

really very practical if made of the wash ribbon, which will stand many washings with a pure soap.

A night gown case is something that few girls possess, as it is a fashion just stolen from our French sisters, who love dainty fittings for their bedrooms. These cases are made of heavy white linen bound with pink or blue wash ribbon an inch in width. In shape they are exactly like a large envelope about eighteen inches square. On the flap of the case or envelope can be embroidered a wreath or some conventional design matching the ribbon binding. You must make also a long, narrow sash and slip it inside the case to secure the gown, and the case generally rests at the foot of the bed during the day.

Hand-made corset covers are always acceptable, and my space is too limited for me to go into the many possibilities of neckwear, but I can safely say that no girl can have too many charming neckpieces in this day, when all well-dressed girls need about a dozen or more.

MARY DEAN.

IF PERPLEXED IN MATTERS OF DRESS, BEAUTY OR ETIQUETTE, write to Miss Dean, Miss Morton or Miss Standish, inclosing a self-addressed and stamped envelope for reply. This is a quicker method than having your question answered in the columns of the paper. Besides, you receive a personal, intimate answer. Be careful to address your return envelope accurately. Letters come back to us every day, stamped "insufficient address" or "party can not be found."

Hair Hints For Spring Millinery.

ALREADY Paris is sending advance news about spring millinery, and the first models point a moral to the woman who would be strictly up-to-date. She must look well to her hair, its condition and modes of dressing. The hat tilted on the left side to show well-groomed tresses beneath, and the tiny toque with sharp wings on either side, for all the world like Mercury's cap, lead all hat shapes. This last means hair to set off the hat, not a hat to set off the hair, so it is none too soon to get your hair in prime condition if you would meet the spring and summer styles half way. There will be no friendly shadows of drooping crowns and thick veils to hide carelessly-dressed tresses this coming season.

Perhaps the most important item in the condition of the hair is cleanliness. You may have hair that reaches below your waist, but if you neglect to shampoo it, and it hangs dead and oily, then the girl with the hair to her shoulders, who keeps it clean and bright, will make a far better showing.

Time was when there was a set rule for shampooing the hair once a month. This rule cannot be applied to every woman, for the girl with oily hair should shampoo it once a week, while all blondes should shampoo every other week at least. Neither will the same shampoo preparation serve for all heads. The girl whose hair is naturally dry needs a stimulating shampoo with oil in it to feed the scalp, while the girl with overmuch oil should use a shampoo containing ingredients which tend to dry up the superfluous grease.

For the average head the following shampoo is very beneficial:

Yolk of one egg, one pint of rain-water (lukewarm) and one ounce of rosemary spirits.

Beat the mixture thoroughly and use it warm, rubbing it well into the scalp. Rinse in many waters and dry the hair in the sun and open air if possible.

Always select a dry, sunny day for shampooing. Sometimes a dry shampoo is very beneficial and imparts to the hair a pleasing odor. If any of my readers who would like such a formula will send me a stamped and self-addressed envelope, I should be glad to send it to them.

But do not think that shampooing the hair now and then will serve to keep it fluffy and in generally good condition. Your hair needs daily attention, just as other parts of your body. Many girls have parted their hair so long in one place that little bald spots begin to appear, or the hair falls to grow thickly about the temples. Nothing is better for this condition than pure vasoline, but be careful when putting it on to rub it into the scalp and not get it all over the hair.

Be careful to use combs and brushes of good quality, and always all things avoid the wire brush—you might as well scratch your scalp with numberless pins. Choose a brush with good bristles, not too hard, and a comb of celluloid or shell, rather than rubber. At least once a week ventilate your hair by rubbing your fingers through it and tossing it so that the air reaches the scalp; and the oftener you sit in the sun with your hair hanging loosely down your back the better, and most important of all, massage the scalp to-day, to-morrow and every day. This is worth all the tonics in the world, for tonics are of no avail poured on the whole mass of hair. To be of real benefit the tonic must be rubbed into the scalp by massage. Especial care should be given to the hair when it starts to grow about the forehead. New hairs are apt to show themselves here, and no amount of hair dressing will cover up an unsightly, ragged line about the face. To keep this in good condition, a massage of oil of equal parts of vasoline and pure almond oil is beneficial. These two ingredients should be warmed together and applied while still warm, about twice a week, massaging the lotion well into the scalp. Girls who have blonde hair that is apt to take on a faded look will find great benefit in using a mixture of fine yellow cornmeal and orris root. Spread a large piece of old linen over the side of your bed, and let your head hang over this. Then rub the cornmeal mixture well into the scalp and through the hair. Shake out and rub in more of the mixture. Repeat this several times, then take a rather soft brush and brush gently until there is no meal left in the hair. This blonde girl should do once every week. It is cleansing as well as stimulating.

Frequent changing of the method of wearing your hair is very beneficial. If you are in the habit of parting your hair in the middle, part it at one side for a few days. If your hair is heavy and you wear it high on your head, let it hang down your back in a braid once in a while. In this way the scalp is relieved on one part of the head is relieved.

Applique Lace Is Easily Made

In the new application of Irish crochet the woman who likes to do fancy work that will produce a striking effect without too much labor has the means at hand. The expert worker will make the patterns herself and produce new designs, while the more amateurish one can unpick the patterns from the old pieces of work which she has and become too worn for use, says the Washington Times.

Irish crochet, applied, as its name implies, consists of patterns of Irish crochet lace applied on Brussels net. The net, which must be the best procurable, is cut to the required shape, then a coarse thread is drawn through the mesh of the net about one-eighth of an inch from the edge all around. This line represents the strengthening line used in ordinary Irish crochet lace, and is worked over in the same way. On this groundwork of net the patterns are applied by arranging and tacking them carefully in place, and afterward sewing them neatly all around on the back of the work.

Many women possess old pieces of Irish crochet which, regretfully, are cast aside as unsuitable on account of the filling having worn away, as this is the portion that always wears out first. If they will examine the lace they probably will find many of the patterns still are good and can be given a new lease of life by unpicking them from the remains of the surrounding filling, and, after carefully cleaning them, applique them. Heavy Irish crochet lace is not so suitable as the lighter makes, and the finer the net the lighter the lace patterns must be.

For a bolero, jacket or dress the strongest make of Brussels net is the best. There must be taken to have the patterns perfectly clean before applying them to the net and to keep the work free from finger marks in the process of marking. This easily can be done by keeping a small piece of tissue paper between the fingers and the work. Long strips of lace or insertion should have the finished portion rolled up and incased in paper as soon as it is worked. In this way it will be kept free from dust and look as clean and crisp as it should be when finished.

Effect of Late Marriages.

Some interesting theories as to the size and weight of newly born children are being advanced by scientists, says the Pathfinder. Some claim that the size of the child depends on the age of the mother; that the older she is the bigger and stronger the child will be. They say that in general the children of very young mothers are likely to be small and ill-nurtured, while those born to women more than twenty-five are apt to be large and robust. Of course, women of twenty-five being fully matured no nourishment is then expended upon her development and thus the child is given all the better chance. The adherents in support of the doctrine cite the Scandinavians, who make late marriages. They have maintained high stature and robust physique as national gifts. On the other hand, in the South of France and of Italy, where young girls are given in marriage and in consequence the race has dwindled in height and frame and even in energy and initiative. Hebrews in Poland are pointed out as a conspicuous example of the evil of early motherhood.

Going further, they even apply the principle to account for the smallness of the Japanese and degeneracy of the Hindustani. It causes the average height and build of city people to be inferior to that of the peasants and it tends to cause physical retrogression in the leisure class, wherein girls marry young, as compared with the class of workers in which the young women have to take up trades or domestic service for several years before they can marry.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA ARE GETTING TOGETHER

Shade of Shakespeare May Yet See Othello—
Cakewalking While Wooing Desdemona—
News of the New York Stage.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(Special.)—Music and drama are getting together more and more. Already they are so mixed that songs are put into melodramas, as well as comedies and farces. As dances go commonly with the songs, it is quite impossible that the ghost of Shakespeare will yet see Othello shipping to the tune of a serenade under Juliet's balcony, and Othello cakewalking in his racial wooing of Desdemona? Anyway, we in New York in a single week have, in new plays, melody of a grand opera, grade in an emotional drama, "Louise," a blend of the score of "The Merry Widow" with the nonsense of a burlesque, and three more usual blends of songs with farcically in "Punchbush" and "Miss Hook of Holland."

A drama to accompany good as to be very close to great, gets scant attention to its first performance in America, because "Louise" is a grand opera, with music so thrilling and commanding as to overshadow the drama. The composer, Gustave Charpentier, who won a place among the master musicians with a score containing the colorful melody of a Puccini with amazingly dramatic devices, and a Strauss would have made a star as a playwright had his work been all spoken instead of partly sung. As a dramatist, let us look at him. As a Frenchman of the appearance and habits of the typical Parisian Bohemian made internationally famous by Maupassant, it is said that this opera tells the story of his own experience in the red-light district of Montmartre, section of the city of pleasures with a working girl who now is his wife. And Charpentier, singing the tenor role in "Louise," disguises himself in the long black hair and whiskers, and the dark, and velvet jacket of the composer, thus accurately reproducing himself.

The daughter of an ignorant laborer, who is wooed by a poet whose cat-faces have been recovered from the gutter, she is to reject his offer of marriage. They do not hear the call of Paris, but they do feel the thrill when, at the prosaic family supper table, the cry is that the opera is too local for transportation.

Then comes a truly great last act. The parents have recovered from the tragedy, but, although she lies on her cot in a hospital, she and her mother clatter, the dishes in the kitchen, the music of Paris with her. The cry is that the opera is too local for transportation. The father, who is a doctor, is to be a child, but the voice of the city of pleasure is heard. ## French Playgoers To War Against the "Matinee Hat"

Gold Medal Offered to Member of Theater Audience Who Makes the Most Successful Assault On Millinery That Obscures His View—Money Thrown To Hero of "Brewster's Millions" By Sydney Audience—Gossip of the Stage Abroad.

(Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.)

ONDO, Jan. 1.—On both sides of the Straits of Dover the ever-present nuisance of the big hat at the theater again is under discussion. By London writers it is asserted that the enjoyment of many juvenile patrons of this season's "pantomime" has been ruined by the adult wearers of those obstructions, but up to date no course of action against them more drastic than moral suasion has been suggested.

To begin with, this journal attempted to form a league of theatrical managers against the big hat, but it failed because three directors held out. Hence the gold medal, which will be awarded "to the spectator who, before the end of the present season, having been annoyed by a woman's hat, shall have made the most successful assault on a big hat which has obscured his view."

Would-be medalists already announce their plans. One will go to the play next time with a pair of shears and "let a little daylight" into any hat that may be before him. Another, who has a fine head of hair, proposes to electrify it and appear in his stall like the fruitful porcupine. He warrants that his locks on end will cover a piece of a small matinee bonnet.

Will Wear Miller's Hat. A third aspirant to the medal declares he has bought a miller's hat, which he will smuggle into the house under a cloak. If he is behind a lady in the usual hat, he will put it on, and wild horses will not tear it off. A fourth revolutionist has the most ingenious, if rather savage, scheme.

"Take," he recommends, "a string about two feet long, and tie a pin to each end. Stick firmly one of the pins into a lady's hat and the other into the stuff back of her neck. The slightest movement will put her on, and wild horses will not tear it off. A fourth revolutionist has the most ingenious, if rather savage, scheme.

Another Fair American. Meanwhile, further up the Strand, the bright, big-eyed star of the Adelphi, "Adeline," is making a "Yankee" of herself. "Happy Family Fiddie" she appears at the Adelphi, moreover, in spite of two attempts to restrain her from so doing, one on the part of the Trivoli and the other on that of the Holborn Music Hall. It appears, and this young lady's excessive "happiness" led her to enter the scene in a "Yankee" costume, and she fled rather seriously. To begin with, there was the one with Robert Arthur, who was of prior standing, and it was indicated, stands in the classic Strand. The other two managers, the Trivoli and the Holborn Music Hall, were not on this score, but on the ground that the "Yankee" was a "Yankee" and had covenanted to appear in their theaters in May, and, in the meantime, not to give performances at any place of entertainment within a mile of either place.

When I examined this fellow," said Mr. Adair, "the 'third degree' was not needed. Out of his own mouth he convicted himself unconsciously. He reminded me, there, of a boy who once applied at my office for work. 'This boy was bright-looking, and I rather took to him. 'Now, my son,' I said, 'if you come to work for me, you will occasionally have to write telegrams and take down 'phone messages. Hence a pretty high degree of schooling is essential. Are you fairly well educated?' 'The boy smiled confidently. 'I be,' he said."

A Hit In Australia. According to all accounts, "Brewster's Millions" is the kindest kind of a success at the opening of the box office sales.

By London writers it is asserted that the enjoyment of many juvenile patrons of this season's "pantomime" has been ruined by the adult wearers of those obstructions, but up to date no course of action against them more drastic than moral suasion has been suggested.

To begin with, this journal attempted to form a league of theatrical managers against the big hat, but it failed because three directors held out. Hence the gold medal, which will be awarded "to the spectator who, before the end of the present season, having been annoyed by a woman's hat, shall have made the most successful assault on a big hat which has obscured his view."

Would-be medalists already announce their plans. One will go to the play next time with a pair of shears and "let a little daylight" into any hat that may be before him. Another, who has a fine head of hair, proposes to electrify it and appear in his stall like the fruitful porcupine. He warrants that his locks on end will cover a piece of a small matinee bonnet.

Will Wear Miller's Hat. A third aspirant to the medal declares he has bought a miller's hat, which he will smuggle into the house under a cloak. If he is behind a lady in the usual hat, he will put it on, and wild horses will not tear it off. A fourth revolutionist has the most ingenious, if rather savage, scheme.

Another Fair American. Meanwhile, further up the Strand, the bright, big-eyed star of the Adelphi, "Adeline," is making a "Yankee" of herself. "Happy Family Fiddie" she appears at the Adelphi, moreover, in spite of two attempts to restrain her from so doing, one on the part of the Trivoli and the other on that of the Holborn Music Hall. It appears, and this young lady's excessive "happiness" led her to enter the scene in a "Yankee" costume, and she fled rather seriously. To begin with, there was the one with Robert Arthur, who was of prior standing, and it was indicated, stands in the classic Strand. The other two managers, the Trivoli and the Holborn Music Hall, were not on this score, but on the ground that the "Yankee" was a "Yankee" and had covenanted to appear in their theaters in May, and, in the meantime, not to give performances at any place of entertainment within a mile of either place.

When I examined this fellow," said Mr. Adair, "the 'third degree' was not needed. Out of his own mouth he convicted himself unconsciously. He reminded me, there, of a boy who once applied at my office for work. 'This boy was bright-looking, and I rather took to him. 'Now, my son,' I said, 'if you come to work for me, you will occasionally have to write telegrams and take down 'phone messages. Hence a pretty high degree of schooling is essential. Are you fairly well educated?' 'The boy smiled confidently. 'I be,' he said."

A Hit In Australia. According to all accounts, "Brewster's Millions" is the kindest kind of a success at the opening of the box office sales.

UNABLE TO PUT

Up Cash Asked By Tobacco Growers.

WAREHOUSEMEN WILLING TO MAKE ADVANCES

TO THE EXTENT OF THEIR RESOURCES.

A CONFERENCE AT PADUCAH.

Paducah, Ky., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—At the dark tobacco meeting here to-day, in which McCracken, Ballard, Marshall, Lyon and Livingston counties of Kentucky and Chesapeake county, Tennessee, were represented, warehousemen told the planters that if they would deliver their tobacco to the warehousemen they would be advanced as much money as they actually need.

According to oral representations prior to signing the agreement, the warehousemen were to advance 50 per cent of the pooled value of the tobacco to the planters. The warehousemen frankly confessed their inability to do it this year. They said they could get as much as will be actually needed by the planters. It was suggested that the planters formally agree to this plan and appoint a committee to confer with the warehousemen. The planters agreed to this, but they did not signify their assent and the meeting adjourned with the situation unchanged.

From speeches of Manager Felix Ewing, John Allen and others it is evident that they have had to meet the argument that because planters are not advanced an advance of 50 per cent, when their tobacco was ready for pricing, the planters are advanced from all advance to the point by which the association's failure to make the advance. The promise is stipulated in the agreement and the warehousemen said the planters would have to stand by the association.

Warehousemen also assured them that it would be late spring before they could possibly hope to realize the association price, because the weed must be in the pink of condition before the planters can get the advance. The keynote of the meeting was "stand by the pool and wait."

Among those in attendance were General Manager Felix Ewing, Capt. W. J. Stone, of Kuttawa; W. A. Miller, of Clarksville; John Allen, of Guthrie; and R. L. Barnett, State Organizer of the Farmers' Union.

Nashville Bank Offer.

Bankers in the dark tobacco district are not manifesting any keenness to take up the proposition of the Farmers' National Bank of Nashville to furnish all the money desired with which to make advances on association tobacco. They insist that they can make as good arrangements to furnish the money as the Nashville institution. The bank at Hardin, Ky., communicated with the Nashville bank concerning the proposition and received a reply to the effect that the Hardin bank should open an account with the American National and deposit security for the advance. The fact that the association fixes the price for its products at a demand in advance of 50 per cent, of this value is the great deterrent to assuring funds to finance the pool.

TAKES BRIDE OF HALF HIS AGE AT THIRD MARRIAGE.

Thomas E. Elzy and Miss Deby Tingle and John Brents and Miss Addie Nelstead Elope to Jeffersonville.

MARRIAGE LICENSE FOR MISS GLADYS VANDERBILT.

Official Papers Authorizing Her Wedding to Count Szechenyi Issued in New York.

New York, Jan. 11.—A marriage license was issued to-day to Miss Gladys Moore Vanderbilt, daughter of John Jacob Vanderbilt, and Count Szechenyi, of Hungary. There were few persons in the marriage license bureau at the City Hall when the couple arrived in a public carriage, and they were not obliged to stand long in the waiting line of prospective brides and grooms. The application blank had been made out in advance, and was ready for presentation when they were taken to the City Clerk's office. Miss Vanderbilt's age was given as twenty-one years, and the count's as twenty-eight years old, by occupation, land-owner and imperial and royal chamberlain, a native of Hungary, and not previously married. In an official copy of the publication of the bans in Orzomo, Hungary, which was shown at the time the application for the license was filed, the Count gave his religion as Roman Catholic.
